

From a Newburyport paper, of August 24.

We stop the press to announce an arrival at Salena on Saturday from Europe, which brings London papers 6 days later than before received, among other articles, our informant adds, they contain the highly important news of a TREATY between the UNITED STATES and GREAT BRITAIN being SIGNED.

The London papers state, that the present British ministry very promptly and pointedly discountenanced the impertinence of capt Love, of the Driver sloop of war, shewn in his answer to the letter of the American commander at Charleston. This looks well; and we infer from it, if the reparation which President Jefferson says he has demanded, for the attack on the Chesapeake, has been sought in the spirit which dictated the proclamation, and is disconnected with other subjects, that the British government will with equal promptness and efficiency comply with the demand. Our expectations, that we shall have NO WAR on account of the outrage on the Chesapeake, is thus strengthened. We find by Steel's list for April, that the Driver was then commanded by capt Love; but by the list for June, that he is removed, and that the Driver is commanded by capt. Claridge.

[Boston paper.]

Captain Pike, with his men, arrived at Nachitoches on the 30th of June—they were taken by the Spaniards and detained some months in the Mexican dominions. All their papers, &c. taken from them.

FANATICISM.

An inconceivable act of atrocity was lately committed by a new sect in the village of Rappertwyl, near Alberg. This sect was unknown a few weeks ago, and their origin is not yet ascertained. All that can be collected respecting them is, that they believed that the end of the world was near, and that there was no other way to save themselves but by following implicitly the inspiration of the Holy Ghost. A young girl, about fourteen years of age, appeared to be the principal organ of these wonderful inspirations. They consulted her upon all occasions, and thought they were bound implicitly to obey her. The first meeting of these sectaries was very secret; but the pastor and sub-prefect of the village being informed that there was to be a numerous meeting within these few days, went thither, and by exhortations prevailed upon them to disperse. They then consulted the young girl what they were to do. She told them that they must go that night in great force to the house of the prefect, and conduct him to a distance. This oracle was obeyed. The prefect was one of the most worthy men in the country, and what adds to the horror of the circumstance, he was the grand-father of this very young girl. He was taken from his own house by this furious crowd, and carried to a considerable distance from his village, where the unhappy girl threw her arms around this respectable old man, and drew him to the ground, and with frantic cries invited the crowd to precipitate themselves upon him, and to save him from perdition by suffocating him. After having put him to death in this manner, without any wound or contusion appearing on his body, the frantic crew danced around their victim, singing praises to the lord. The principal actors in this dreadful scene have been arrested and taken to Berne. There is a woman among them, who is suspected of having given them some kind of elixir, which deranged their intellects and rendered them furious.
