EVACUATION OF SOUTH AMERICA.

The Saracen sloop, of 18 guns, arrived yesterday at Portsmouth, with dispatches from lieutenant general White Locke, dated the 16th of July, containing the ungrateful intelligence, that the British forces under his command had made an attack upon Buenos Ayres, but had experienced so much resistance from the numerous forces of the enemy, that after having gained possession of part of the town, it was thought prudent to enter into a capitulation, by which it has been agreed to evacuate not only the part of Buenos Ayres of which our troops had gained possession, but Montevideo, Maldonado, in fine, the whole of South America, within the short space of two months. The following bulletin was sent from the admiralty to the lord mayor, and, by his order, posted on the auction-house, and communicated to Lloyd's.

Downing street, Sept. 12, 1807.

Lord Castlereagh has the honour of acquainting the lord mayor, that dispatches have been received this morning, from lieutenant general White Locke, dated July 16, by which it appears, that in an attack upon the town of Buenos Ayres, his majesty's troops experienced so much resistance from the tumultuous force of the enemy, that after gaining possession of part of the town, with severe loss, on the 4th of July, the lieutenant general thought it prudent to enter into a negotiation with the Spaniards, who commanded the enemy's forces, by which he agreed to evacuate South America within two months, upon condition that all prisoners taken at the attack, as well as those captured at the surrender of Buenos Ayres, should be restored. The total loss amounts in killed 316, wounded 673, missing 208.

To the right honourable the lord mayor.

It thus appears that our loss in killed, wounded, and missing, amounts to 1,200 men. The remainder, according to the terms of the capitulation, are now on their way home.

RUSSIA AND SWEDEN.

It is stated in a letter from Stockholm, of the 10th of August, that the Russian ambassador had delivered a note to the Swedish government, in which it was declared, that if assistance were rendered to the British fleet, or any part of it admitted into the ports of Sweden, it would be considered as a declaration of war; and that the emperor of Russia would march an army into Finland.
