The president of the United States, the secretary of the navy, and several other persons of distinction have sent, within a few days, to procure cloth for coats from the factory of Col. Humphreys. We understand a large quantity is now manufacturing from the full bodied fleece, for the purpose.

The proprietor of the Merino flock has lately received so many applications for a supply of them, that he has directed his agent to write the following

CIRCULAR

TO ALL APPLICANTS.

Humphreysville, December, 1808.

I am instructed to inform you, there will be a considerable number of full bodied Merinos for sale next season. The price will be 150 dollars each Ram or Ewe. Many applications have already been received and registered. Yours will be put on the list this date. Definitive engagements must be made before the first of May next; and in order to prevent disappointment on either side, it is clearly to be understood, that it is the intention of Col. Humphreys, that all persons who shall be supplied so far as his stock will permit, consistently with his arrangements to preserve a nursery for the public, according to the date of their applications. Under that limitation, it is apprehended it will not be in his power to accommodate all applicants. I will expect your attention before the 1st of May.

I am, Sir, &c.

A most wonderful curiosity has lately been sent to J. Selwands, Esq; Portman Square, London, it is a hawk of a very large size, caught at the Cape of Good Hope; he has round his neck a gold collar of curious workmanship, on which have been discovered the words—"This goodlike hawk doth belong to his most excellent majesty, James, king of England, A. D. 1610." The hawk still betrays a degree of vigour, and the only symptom of old age discoverable is a dimness of sight, and a change in the colour of the feathers round the neck. [Lon. Paper.]
