PROPOSALS

By Edward Eagle, of Philadelphia, FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION, THE WORKS OF CORNELIUS TACITUS, With an Essay on his Life and Genius; Notes, Supplements, &c. BY ARTHUR MURPHY, ESQ. THE FIRST AMERICAN FROM THE LONDON EDITION, With the Author's last corrections.

AS a brief recommendation of the above works to those to whom they may not be already known, the following notice of them is copied from the London Review of the time when they were first published. "Though" says the Review, "it be with the translation of Tacitus that we have now to do, not with the character of that original and great historian himself, it would be difficult, perhaps unnatural and indecorous, to pass by the present opportunity of recognising the merit of that sublime genius, and joining in the general voice of applause and admiration Cornelius Tacitus, by a rare felicity of circumstances, united in himself all these relations, qualities and accomplishments, that are requisite to form a great historian: He was of senatorial rank, and in that order highly distinguished. He enjoyed the favour of the princes and sovereigns of the civilized world, and held civil offices of the highest dignity and importance. He possessed a native probity and elevation of mind; and these noble qualities were heightened and confirmed by an habitual conversancy with the history of the Roman republic, and an education in the principles of the sublimest philosophy. The profundity of his reflections, the precision of his diction, his elegant and energetic brevity, and something remarkably picturesque and dramatic in his manner, conspire, with the dignity and importance of his subjects, to clothe his works with a never-fading bloom, and render his fame immortal. He records the actions, the counsels, the secret motives of the great actors in the greatest political drama that was ever exhibited on the world; and the History of Tacitus, as is well observed by his accomplished translator and critic, is "Philosophy teaching by example."

The contents of the volumes seem naturally to admit of the following division:

1. A dedication to the right Honourable Edmund Burke, an Essay on the Life and Genius of Tacitus; and the Annals of Tacitus with supplement; and an appendix; a genealogical table with an index, of the Caesars; notes on the Annals and appendix, and maps of the ancient world as known to the Romans and of Asia. 2. The History of Tacitus, with an appendix, and notes to the history and appendix; and maps of the city of Jerusalem, and of Italy. 3. The celebrated and valuable Treatise on the manners of the Germans, with notes, and a map of ancient Germany; and the life of Agricola, with notes, and a geographical table of the places, rivers, &c. mentioned in these volumes. To these authentic works of Tacitus is added "The dialogue concerning Oratory, of which, as Mr. Murphy in a note has justly remarked, 'The commentators are much divided in their opinions about the real author. This work, they all agree, is a masterpiece in the kind; written with taste and judgment; entertaining, profound and elegant. But whether it is to be ascribed to Tacitus, Quintilian, or any other person whom they cannot name, is a question upon which they have exhausted a store of learning.' The principal arguments pro and con, says in conclusion, although he seems to lean to the opinion that it is the production of Tacitus: 'The dispute is of no importance for, as Lipinus says, whether we give the dialogue to Quintilian or to Tacitus, no inconvenience can arise. Whoever was the author, it is a performance of uncommon beauty.'

"Mr. Murphy has given the sense of his author in a pleasing and proper style, and even caught not a little of his manner; in order to do which, in so long a work, it was necessary to be master of the whole compass of the English language. His notes and supplements show that he is intimately conversant with Roman antiquity, and with literature in general. He views the objects that pass before him with the eye of a critic, a moralist and a politician; and in particular he makes interesting comparisons between the situations and characters of different ancient and modern tribes and nations."

CONDITIONS. 1. The works of Tacitus shall be put to press as soon as a sufficient number of subscriptions shall be obtained to justify it. 2. They shall be printed with a new pica type on a fine paper made for the purpose, with proper attention to uniformity of colour and quality throughout. 3. The volumes shall be delivered in the order in which they are published, and shall succeed each other as speedily as due attention to the execution will permit. Each volume to be paid for on delivery at 2 dollars 50 cts. per volume, in boards. The London edition of Tacitus, is in 8 vols 8vo; and the American edition will be in 6 vols 8vo; and will sell at half the price of the former. Such as may become answerable for the amount of six copies, shall be entitled to a seventh. Philadelphia, November, 1811.

Subscriptions for the above work received By George Shaw, & Co. Annapolis.
