OBITUARY.

COMMUNICATED. Among the various melancholy duties of the Press, no death has occurred of his that has occasioned more sensible feeling than the one now recorded. On the 11th day of December died in this city, Dr. John Gassawar, of Rhode-River, whose last moments corresponded with his short and excellent life. Where he was known, he was beloved; when he lived he was adored; the poor found always an asylum beneath his roof; the rich received the most unbounded hospitality; no discrimination of situation changed the liberal flow of his soul, and the child of want never left his doorunstisfied. To those who knew him eulogi-um would be insult; to those who did not suffice it to say, that as a man d christian charity he lived, so as a christian he died lamented, but as a man reigned.—Peace to the memory of a man of
