Translated for the Federal Gazette.

A NARRATIVE Of the conspiracy in Paris, on the 27th October last.

Gen. Mallet who had been a leader of the Chouans in la Vendee, entered after the peace concluded with his party, into the service of the First Consul, and was appointed commander of brigade, and afterwards general-He, however soon became suspected, and was charged with being implicated in the conspiracy of the Opera. He was disgraced & alternately confined in the prisons of the Temple of La Force and of Vincennes; but affecting madness, he was removed to St. Mande, where government maintain a hospital for the cure of maniacs. Every remedy which had for eighteen months been prescribed by his physicians, proving abortive, they pronounced him incurable. Having after sometime, apparently recovered his serenity of mind, and no longer creating Buspicion, he was included in a free range of the building-perceiving that he was no longer observed, he seized his opportunity to escape, and succeeded. He set off on foos at night for Paris, in search of an Able, his particular friend. On his way he met an old companion named Vateau, then a serjeant of the Emperor's guard, and prevailed on him to follow as far as the Abbe's when arrived he announced to him that Buonaparte was dead, and that he was appointed by a Senatus Consultum, (previously counterfeir ed by the Abbe) Commander General in Chief of Paris and the Department of the Seine-That a great revolution had exploded, and that it was immediately necessary to prepare for it. He dressed up Vateau as his aid-de-camp; while he assumed the uniform of his new promotion, which had been previously obtained, besides many more intended for officers of superior rank ;horses were prepared, and they set out accompanied only by a servant of the Abbe, and reached Vincennes. Mallet asked for the officer of the fortress, commanded by a colonel of the 27th regiment, and thus addressed him:

"The tyrant is no more; vive la Republique! France is free, and the Conscription abolished! Thousands of Frenchmen dragged from their families by the insatiable ambition of the Usurper, are returning home-The army of Spain is on its march to France, and a general armistice is proclaimed to our enemies in expectation of peace.

" To obtain this end, and insure tranquility to the commonwealth, the Senate has thought proper in its wisdom to adopt the most prompt and efficacious steps-consequently, it nominates a provisional directory of five members; Talleyrand, Fouche, Sieyes, Barthelemy, and Cambaceres, who are instantly to be installed in office, in conformity to the constitution of 1795.

"Gen. Moreau recalled from exile, is appointed generalissimo of the armies of the republic.

"Gen. Lahorie, yow confined in the prison of La Force, minister of

"Gen. Mallet, wholly charged of Paris and the Department of the Seine." Mallet then inquiring with sternness of the astonished colonel, the strength of his troops, was told, that a great part were on duty in Paris, and that the remainder were barely necessary for the protection of his post-But how many effective men have you !- About 250-That is enough with the force I have distributed in Paris, to commence my operations. In a quarter of an hour the detachment was ready to march, accompanied by the officers on the spot, who volunteered their services. With whom Mallet proceeded to Savary's, the Duke of Rovigo. He dismissed the ministers guard, which dressed in white like himself, and belonging to the same regiment, were ordered to post themselves in a street of the suburbs of St. Antoine, until further orders. Ascending the apartment of the minister, who was preparing for bed, he had him arrested, bound and carried off. With his escort he hurried to the Hotel de la Force, shewed his natus Consultum to the officer of the guard and the gaoler, requiring the delivery of gen. Lahorie and officers confined with him. Lahorie starting from his bed, asked if death had been decreed against him by the tyrant-No general, the very reverse; read this. Mailet directing the gaoler to attend strictly to his orders, and to hold every dungeon were arrested.

ready for the reception of prisoners who might be sent to him, delivered Savary into his custody, and departed with those he had liberated. The prisons re-echoed with shouts of li-

Arrived at Maret's, the Dake of Bassano, he arrested him, sent him to prison and installed La Horie in his place-he dismissed the guard and ordered it to the post assigned for the former. "I leave every one in office, (said La Horie) it was by compulsion you served a tyrantyou will with zeal serve the repub-lic." He immediately ordered the secretaries and the principal clerks to make out their accounts and assist him in the duties of his office.

Mallet proceeded on to Paquier, an honest citizen of Brest, who had been made presect of the Seine. He was from home-orders were immediately given to renew the guard permitting his return, but requiring his safekeeping.

Posting off to gen. Hullin, (commandant of Paris) Mallet ordered the guard together with his own to retire, and going up to the general, said, "I arrest you in the name of the Republic! Deliver up your sword! To the objections made by the general he produced his senatus consultum, which, however, gen. Hullin maintained did not appear to him satisfactory. Here replied Mailet is that which will dispel your doubts; drawing from his bosom a pistol, instead of the looked for document, he shot Hullin through the brain, closing the door after him, he joined his guard and forbade their permitting any one to enter or escape. With the remnant of his followers, he marched to La place de Vendome. In consequence however of the bustle and explosion of the pistol in the house, some of the family taking the alarm, made their escape, and headed Mallet, in their flight to the Etat Major. Doucet who was the commander, had hastily summoned to his room all the adjutants and officers of his staff, whom he could coilect. He met Mallet in his hait. What said the General are you still here? I am at my post. But I had given orders to arrest you. For what? There read your arrest. That moment Doucet, (a very athletic man) sprang upon him and cenfining his arms, by repeated calls drew down to his assistance his officers who with drawn swords unanimously exclaimed that he was a traitor, that the emperor was not dead, and the report a falsehood, "Soldiers!" cried they, " will you serve an impostor? tremble for yourselves!' The wavering soldiery paused, were gained over, and submitted. The unhappy Mailet was overpowered and secured. Proceeding directly to La Force, Savary, and the Duke of Bassano (Maret) were liberated La Horie who had already despatch ed various couriers with his orders was arrested, and by dawn of day was dissipated an illusion that for a time seemed once more to promise

France a glimpse of independence. La Horie had already made heavy drafts on the imperial treasury and on all the public coffers. Orders had been transmitted along the road from Paris to Boulogne, directing the military to hold themselves in readiwith the execution of the present ness to guard certain prisoners of Senatus Consultum, general in chief state. Who were they? The Empress herself, and the young King of Rome, who were intended to be sent to England. The post which does not leave Paris till half past 2 o'clock, had been prepared to start by 8 o'clock in the morning. Upon searching the mail, it was discovered that the letters had been taken out and replaced with copies of senatus consultums, and printed proclamations to the several provinces. Mallet throughout his trial persisted in declaring that the plan was entirely his own, that he knew no accomplices, and that all who were concerned with him he had deluded. He was asked what he thought of La Horie, the friend of gen Moreau; his reply was, that he was as ignorant of his measures as the rest. That he had selected such soldiers as he knew to be disaffected to the tyrant, and had employed them as his instruments, certain of being abetted by them without the danger of being betrayed. Many, however, were sentenced to the scaffold, on the plea, that although the emperot were dead, the cry of the nation should still have been Vive L' Empereur, and not Pive La Republique, a crime of high treason, which must have been evident at the time to those who wilfully made themselves guilty of it. Eighteen persons were executed on the following day. On the succeeding days upwards of 1000

Mallet died with the utmost courage. He gave the signal to the platoon to fire which twice proved ineffectual; to the very list he maintained that Buonaparte was dead. Hullin died the third day after his wound. The Abbe was arrested and shot. Col. Rabs, who was a member of the court martial that decreed the death of the Duke D'Enghein, wept the whole way to the pace of execution, protesting his innucence and attachment to his dear imperial master. By order of the Empress his execution was suspended.

It is presumed that a great portion of the military and civil authorities would have engaged in the revolution, had the first attempts of the conspirators succeeded.

Notwithstanding the developed ment and simplicity of its designs, this scheme was near obtaining complete success, and the ruinous fabric of tyrannical power, was on the eve of being subverted by a mere forgery; which proves that France is ready to burst asunder the iron yoke, beneath which the nation
