Accompanying the report of the secretary of state respecting our foreign relations.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Barlow to Mr. Monroe, dated Paris, May 12, 1812.

After the date of my letter, of which I have the honour to enclose you a copy, I found, from a pretty sharp conversation with the Duke of Bassano, that there was a singular reluctance to answering my note of the 1st of May.

I am confident that the president will approve the motive of my solicitude in this affair and the earnest manner in which I pressed the minister with it as soon as my knowledge of the declaration of the Prince Regent enabled me to use the argument that belonged to the subject.

THE COURT OF APPEALS Will sit for the Western Shore on the second Monday in August next for the purpose of hearing arguments and giving judgments in all cases of appeal and writs of error standing under the argument, and to act on the business of the court generally.

William Duval, Earnestly requests all persons indebted to him to settle immediately, and those who have claims against him to present the same for payment, as he intends removing from Annapolis in a few days.

Anne-Arundel County, On application to me the subscriber in the recess of Anne-Arundel county court, as associate judge for the third judicial district of Maryland, by petition in writing of George Poole, of said county, praying for the benefit of the act for the relief of sundry insolvent debtors, and the several supplements thereon on the terms mentioned in said act, a schedule of his property, and a list of his creditors, on oath, being annexed to his petition, and having satisfied me that he has resided in the state of Maryland two years immediately preceding the time of his application, having also stated in his petition that he is a debtor for debt, and having prayed to be discharged therefrom, I do hereby order and discharge that the person of George Poole be discharged from imprisonment, and by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Maryland Gazette for three months successively before the third Monday of September next, give notice to his creditors to appear before the county court of said county on the said third Monday of September, for the purpose of recommending a trustee for their benefit, and to show cause, if any they have, why the said George Poole should not have the benefit of the act as prayed for.

Richard H. Harwood, Esq. In conversing with you about the note which you did me the honour to address to me on the 1st of May, I could not conceal from you my surprise at the doubt which you had expressed in that note, respecting the revocation of the decrees of Berlin and Milan.

That revocation was proven by many official acts, by all my correspondents with your predecessors and with you, by the decisions in favour of American vessels. You have done me the honour to ask a copy of the letters which the grand judge and minister of finances wrote on the 25th December, 1810, to state the first effects of that measure, and you have said, sir, that the decree of the 28th April, 1811, which proves definitively the revocation of the decrees of Berlin and Milan in regard to the Americans, was not known to you.

I have the honour to send you, as you have desired, a copy of these three acts; you will consider them without doubt, sir, the plainest answer which I could give to this part of your note. As to the two other questions to which that note relates, I will take care to lay them before the Emperor. You know already,

LEIPZIG, May 4.

The great battle of the 2d was fought with the utmost obstinacy. Napoleon had the greatest number of men; the allies were superior in cavalry. In artillery both sides were equal. The French moved in square masses, garnished at the corners like bastions, with cannon, which by their cross fire might keep off the attacks of cavalry. Night alone put an end to this battle; and the allied army bivouacked on the field. The 3d passed over without fighting.

VIENNA, May 5.

Lieut. Gen. Hiller has, it is said, been appointed to the command of an army corps which is assembled in Upper Austria. The Hulan regiments of the Archduke Charles, and the Hohenlohe dragoons, have received orders to join the corps which is in Styria and the head quarters of which are at Patau. Magazines are forming at Raab and Radkersburg.

AUGSBURG, May 11.

The Vienna public are extremely impatient to learn the purport of the Imperial Declaration which is now in the press, and the publication of which is momentarily expected. We learn from Vienna that the Count de Mettermich, Austrian Minister for foreign affairs, has frequent conferences with the count de Narbonne, ambassador from France.

We have just learned the death of Prince Kutusoff, & the appointment of Wittgenstein as his successor in the chief command of the Russo-Prussian army. The chief command was offered to General Bennigsen, who declined it, and who remained at his post, as quarter master general of the Emperor Alexander.

POSEN, May 3.

To-day the Russian Gen. in Chief of the Western army, Barclay de Tolly, arrived here with his Staff, with him are Lt. General Salancoff, Chief of the Staff, and several other Generals. The army has already arrived in this vicinity. It marches by different roads in several columns. Lt. Gen. Saas commands the reserve, and Lt. Gen. Ischaplitz the advanced guard, which has been here for some time, and yesterday began its march for Frankfort on the Oder, for which destination the army will follow the day after to-morrow.

Neighborhood of Dantzic, April 30.

According to the account of a Prussian officer lately arrived from Dantzic, all there have been arrested. Of the 17,000 men of which the garrison consists, there are, by the same account, 10,000 sick, and of these 100 die daily. Three thousand of the garrison of Dantzic lately made a sally in which they carried off a considerable quantity of cattle.

the villages; the batteries in the open country were supported by masses of infantry in solid squares. The plan of operation determined upon on view of the enemy, was to attack the village of Gros Groschen with artillery and infantry, and in the meanwhile to pierce the line to the enemy's right of the villages, with a strong column of cavalry in order to cut off the troops in the villages from support.

The remainder of the enemy's line was to be engaged according to circumstances, by the corps opposed to it.

The cavalry of the Prussian reserve, to whose lot this attack fell, presented themselves and supported their movements with great gallantry, but the showers of grape-shot and musketry, to which they were exposed on reaching the hollow way, made it impracticable for them to penetrate; and the enemy appearing determined to maintain the villages at any expense, the affair assumed the most expensive character of attack and defence, of a post repeatedly taken, lost and retaken.

The cavalry made several attempts to break the enemy's line, and behaved with the most exemplary coolness and regularity under every heavy fire; in some of these attacks they succeeded in breaking into the squares and cutting down the infantry.

Late in the evening, Buonaparte having called in the troops from Leipsick, and collected all his reserves, made an attack from his left on the right of the allies, supported by the fire of several batteries advancing.

The vivacity of this movement made it expedient to change the front of the nearest brigades on the right, and as the whole cavalry from the left was ordered to the right to turn this attack, and to charge it. I was not without hopes of witnessing the destruction of Buonaparte and all his army; but before the cavalry could arrive, it became so dark, that nothing could be distinguished but the flashes of the guns.

The allies remained in possession of the disputed villages, and of the line on which the enemy had stood. Orders were given to renew the attack in the morning, but the enemy did not wait for it, and it was judged expedient, with reference to the general posture of the cavalry, not to pursue. The wounded have all been removed across the Elbe, while the cannon and prisoners taken, and the ground wrested from the enemy in the action are incontestible proofs of the success of the allies.

Both sovereigns were in the field the whole day. The King was chiefly near the village where his troops were engaged. The Emperor was repeatedly in every part of the field where he was received with the most animating cheers by every corps he approached. The fire to which his person was not infrequently exposed, and the casualties which took place near him, did not appear in the least to disturb his attention from the objects to which it was directed, and which he followed without any ostentation.

Gen. Wittgenstein, with the army is between the Elbe and the Elster, with the command of several bridges over the former.

The Russian troops of all arms fully realized the expectations I had formed of their bravery and steadiness, and the emulation and spirit of patriotism which pervades the Prussian army, merits the highest encomium.

I have the honour to be, &c. (Signed) CATHCART. The Lord Viscount Castlereagh, &c. &c.

These are the results of this day, up to this present. God bless our arms! He visibly and during the battle protected both our beloved monarchs, who several times exposed themselves to danger, even in the villages where the battle raged the hottest. Foreign Office, May 25, 1813. DESPATCH.

Lord Castlereagh to Viscount Castlereagh.

DRESDEN, MAY 6, 1813.

MY LORD,

My last dispatches informed your Lordship of the arrival of the ruler of France and of the concentration of his forces near Erfurth and towards the Saale, as also that of the allies upon Elster.

I have now the honour of enclosing herewith the official statements which have been published by the Russian and Prussian governments, of the general action which took place on the 2d inst. between the two armies; and after which the allies remained in possession of the field of battle, and of the positions from which in the course of the day they had dislodged the enemy.

The last division of Gen. Tormazoff's corps having crossed the Elbe, on the 28th ult. the whole of it moved forward by forced marches to the Elster. His Imperial Majesty and the King of Prussia arrived at Borna on the morning of the 1st inst. with the reserve; and the several parts of the army were on the same day collected in that place.

Marshal Prince Koutousoff Smolensko was left ill on the march at Buntzlau, where he died; but his death was not published. Count Wittgenstein, at that time at Zwenkau, was appointed to command the army.

He had on that day reconnoitered the enemy and ascertained his position; and the same evening a disposition was made for a general attack to take place on the following morning at day break.

During the preceding week the advance of the enemy's main army towards Naumburg and the approach of Beauharnois from Quodlinburg had been indicated by several skirmishes and partial affairs, particularly at and near Halle and Merseburg, where the Prussians behaved with gallantry.

On the evening of the first the enemy appeared to have great masses of his force between Lutzen and Weisenfels, and after dusk a strong column was seen moving in the direction of Leipsic, to which place there was clear evidence that he intended to move.

The advance corps of Count Wittgenstein's army having been engaged on the same evening to the East and North of Lutzen, the cavalry of it remained there to amuse the enemy in the morning, but with orders to retire gradually. Meanwhile the several columns of the army were ordered to cross the Elster, at Pegau, and bear down and to follow the course of a rivulet which rising near the Elster runs in a northwest direction to the Saale, by which movement the ground favoured, it was intended to turn the enemy's right between Weisenfels and Lutzen, while his attention was directed to his left between the latter place and Leipsic.

As soon as their majesties saw the troops placed according to the disposition, the whole was put in motion towards the enemy.

The country is uncovered and open, the soil dry and light, but with a very considerable variety of hill and valley, and much intersected by hollow ways and mill streams, the former not discernable till closely approached.

The enemy placed behind a long ridge and in a string of villages of which Gorschen is the principal, with a hollow way in front and a stream sufficient to float timber on the left, waited the near approach of the allies.

He had an immense quantity of 12 pounders and large calibres distributed throughout the line, and in

(Continued from last page.) The enemy at the same time presented a numerous artillery, chiefly of heavy calibre, and the use of musketry in the villages was kept up with great vivacity for several hours.

In this murderous battle the villages of Klien Gorschen and Rhano, as likewise the village of Gross-Gorschen, were early taken by storm, and with unexampled bravery, and kept possession of for several hours. At length the enemy returned in considerable force, surrounded, and in part retook these villages; but on the attack being renewed, was not able to retain possession of them. The Prussian guards moved forward, and after a most obstinate combat of an hour and a half, those villages were again retaken from the enemy, and remained in our possession. During this time the corps of Gen. Winzingerode on the left wing and the corps of Gen. York, with a part of the Russian troops under Gen. Berg, had taken a share in the battle. We stood opposed to the enemy at the distance of 100 paces, and one of the most bloody battles became general.

Our reserves had drawn near the field of battle to be in readiness wherever needful, and thus was the battle continued till near 7 o'clock in the evening. During its course, the villages on the left wing were likewise several times taken and retaken by both parties. At 7 o'clock the enemy appeared with a new corps on our right wing before Gross and Klien Gorschen—probably with the viceroy's army; made a brisk attack on us, and endeavoured to tear from us the advantages we had gained.

The infantry of a part of the Russian reserves was now brought forward to the right wing, to the support of Gen. York's corps, which was briskly attacked, and the most desperate engagement (in which the Russian artillery during the whole remaining time greatly distinguished itself, as did the corps of York, Blucher and Winzingerode, the whole day) was now continued till night came on. The enemy had likewise again attacked our centre and the villages with great briskness, but we maintained our position. In this situation night put an end to the battle. The enemy was to have been again attacked on the following morning, the 3d of May. He had meanwhile taken Leipsic during the battle. This obliged us to manoeuvre with him. It was not till afterwards that we were informed, that in consequence of the battle he had again been forced to quit it, and had by the same means lost Halle, and 15,000 men of his best troops; many of his cannon are dismounted, and a number of his powder wagons blown up. Our light detachments are again at liberty to harass him, and to prosecute the advantage gained. We have consequently kept the field of battle, the victory is ours, and the intended purpose is accomplished. Near 50,000 of our best troops have not yet been engaged; we have not lost a single cannon, and the enemy must have perceived what can be effected by united national feelings, between two firmly allied nations, in courage and resistance: and that the just hand of Providence protects the just cause of those powers who have no object but their independence and to found a durable peace on the freedom of all nations.

Such was the battle of the 2d of May, fought near the plain of Lutzen, where the liberty of Germany was once before conquered. With the courage of lions did both Russians and Prussians fight for it, and their endeavours have not been in vain. The loss we have sustained may amount to about 10,000 men but the most of them are only slightly wounded. Among the killed on the Prussian side, we have, among several other valuable staff-officers, to lament the loss of the Prince of Hesse Homburg. Our wounded are on the Russian part, General Von Kantonierzyn; on the Prussian, Generals Blucher and Scharnhorst slightly, and Huncerhein dangerously. On the French side, according to the report of the prisoners, we learn that Marshal Bessieres is killed. Ney and Souham wounded. Upwards of 1000 prisoners are already brought in, ten pieces of artillery taken, and some thousand muskets captured at Halle. Our light troops are now occupied in pursuing the enemy. Although the numerous villages lying near to each other in this territory and its canals, together with the precaution taken by the enemy never to appear in the
