BUTLAND, (VT.) FER. 29. A TALE OF HORROR.

The painful duty devolves on us of vecording one of the most distressing, barbarous and inhuman murders that stands recorded on the historic page of civilized society-a deed at which humanity shud-ders, and indignation knows no bounds. The following among others, are the most interesting cirenmstances which have transpired, concerning this horrid transaction,

On Tuesday evening, the 15th instant, Mr. Joseph Green, a young merchant of this village, was missing from home; but little alarm however, was experienced in consequence of his absence, until the Thursday evening following some of his friends supposing he might have probably left town, on urgent business, in one of the stages; but the northern and eastern stages having arrived, without furnishing any information of him, the alarm for his safety became general. On Friday morning, search was made thro' out the village, and persons dispatched into the adjacent towns. Suspicions as to his fate had entered the breasts of many. A person by the name of James Anthony, a hatter by trade, was strongly susproceed of being accessary to his se-cretion, if not murder, in consequence of marks of violence which appeared on his face, and the singufar manner in which he accounted for the same. His shop was searched on Friday morning, but without effect. Another search, however, was determined on in the afternoon, and on removing a pile of wood which was placed under the stairs that reached the upper loft, the mangled remains of the murdered Green were discovered! Anthony was immediately arrested, and a jury of inquest summoned, who, after examination of the body and witnesses, returned a verdict of " wilful murder by the hand of James Anthony." The criminal was arraigned before Nathan Osgood, Esq. who ordered his commitment to prison, until the sitting of the supreme court in this town, on Mon-

Mr. Green was a son of Deacon Ezekiel Green, of this town, of the age or 27 years. He had been in the mercantile line in this place for sometime past.

MARCH 2. The Supreme Court commenced its adjourned session in this town on Monday last. The grand jury have found a bill against James Anthony for the murder of Joseph Green, and he will probably take his trial to-morrow or Friday. We apprehend this will be one of the most interesting trials that ever took place in this state.

MARYLAND GAZETTE. STATOCIS. THURSDAY MARCH 17: 1814.

Have those men who are continually, though without sincerity, brawle ing in grogshops, and other public planes, about " free trade and sailers rights, forgotten the means they made use of, during the administration of Mr. Adams, to check the growth of a navy, and prevent commerce that protection which it absolutely demanded against the aggressions of French pirates and free pronounced many of the measures booters? Their opposition to this maritime defence is not so long ago but it is yet-fresh in the recollection of every one who fived and noted the passing events of that period A war commenced at that time, accompanied with the same disgrace and disasters which have attended the present, would have set the whole wigwam into a commotion, and probably been productive of calamities more serious and dreadtul among ourselves than any this country has yet experienced-The cry of "ingratitude," and " a French alliance," resounded from the shores of the Atlantic to the banks of the Mississippi, and from the northern to the southern extremity of this nation. Presses were employed, and foreigners hired, by ambitious and restless demagogues, to represent the rupture with France as the basest ingratitude of which this government could be guilty. Washington, who had toiled through the revolution, and devoted the best years of his life to the interest of his country, lost all influence with them, and was calumniated and abused in common with all others who were friends to American liberty and ind pendence. Let these men, who thus clamoured against taxes, an army, and a navy, which were justly deemed necessary to protect unsultied the dignity of this government against the multiplied outrages of France, and reviled the saviour of his country as a "murderer", a "tory," and a "traiter," cast back one solitary thought on their conduct, and their cheeks must flush with shame at the galling recollection -The navy they so much reprobated, has been the school of those patriots and heroes who have supported the honour of the country during the present unnecessary and truly disastrous war. Such has been the extravagance of Mr. Madisor.'s administration, that the expenses of one year are stated greatly to exceed those of Washington and Adams during the twelve years they remained in office. Is this the system of econo my the French faction desired so much to introduce, and which they represented as fraught with so great advantages to a republican government. We need not recur to the speeches of Madison and others, while members of congress on this subject, because their sentiments, or rather their professions, are too well known to require it. Let the people compare the present situati. on of their country with what it was in times past-calculate, with as much certainty as circumstances will permit the losses she has sustained, and estimate the enormous load of public debt the war has accumulated upon her, and they will then be able to see what they have gained by placing Madison in the chair of state to conduct the impor-

"The democrate immediately in

I have been called upon business or had an opportunity of travelling, do not know what opinion to give respect ting Mr. Deater's letter to the electors of Massachusetts-How the Boston democrats, who once accused him of burning down the war-olfice, and heaped upon him every odious epithet the language of the country afforded them, could have faller so violently in love with him and his principles. seems to them strange passing strange; for he has of our administration, as they really are, ruinous & oppressive-Others he has said were unconstitutional, and seems, spon his own confession, to be greatly surprised that he is brought forward as a candidate for the first office in the state, stby a party to which he does not belong. This appears to stagger them mure than any thing else, because it is contrary to their usual course to bestow their suffrages on any man who is not, what they call, a " thorough-going up-to the-bub fellow."-As Mr. Dexter, who is ack: ogtedged on all sides to be a man of brilliant talents, and great legal acquirements, has said of the restrictive system on commerce, "That it overleaps the tounds of constitutional power," their faith in the infallibility of its authors. begins to waver, and in some cases to be shaken to its very base. The only object which the democrats in Boston could possibly have in view; by bringing forward Mr. Dexter as their candidate for governor, must, I think, from the little knowledge I have of the federalies of that state. be wholly defeated, for I have no idea that they will desert their old and tried friend, Caleb Strong, who has conducted them thus far through the trials they have been compelled to struggle with since the war, with the greatest integrity and wisdom Such a man may be justly considered an ornament to society, for he is a friend to the rights of his fellowcitizens, and an enemy to any encroathments of our rulers on the sovereignty of the states. Thus I conceive, that Mr. Dexter acled wisely when he declined the honors offered him by the "party to which be dees not belong;" for he could not exp ct, if he felt disposed, to break down the popularity of a man like governor Strong, who has such a hold upon the confidence and affections of his fellow-citizens-Then again, his having differed with the federalists upon the war gives them some hopes that he may become a convert to democracy, and be bro't wer as some others have been, by a fat office under the governmentbut in this, I flatter myself, they will be mistaken. What Mr. Dexter's secret views are I cannot say; out from his letter should not judge that he intended forsaking the party to which he has hitherto professed to belong, and whose principles he has, on almost all occasions, strenuously espoused and advocated. It is really laughable, however, to see the quandary this celebrated letter has thrown the firebrands of democracy into in this part of the country where I reside, and I sometimes amuse myself with their apparent distress."
