From the Kingston Royal G September 10.

The following droll ballad was written sometima time by one of the most distinguished poets of the age, but has only Rhely made its appearance in a few of the most respectable London papers.

THE MARCH TO MOSCOW. Buonaparte he would set out For a summer excuesion to Moscow:

The fields were green and the sky was Morbleu! Parlileu! What a pleasant excursion to Moscow

Four hundred thousand mon and more, Hey ho, for Moscow! There were marshals by dozens and dukes by the score, Princes a few, and kings one or

While the fields are so green and the sky so blue, Morbleu! Parbleu! What a pleasant excursion to Moscow

There was Junot and Angereau, Heigh ho, for Moscow! Dombrowsky and Poniatowsky Nothing would do, While the fields were so green and the sky so blue, Morbleu! Parbleu! But they must be marching to Moscow But then the Russians they turned to, All on the read to Moscow. Nau had to fight his way all thro'

They could fight, but they could no parley vous, But the fields were green and the sky was blue, Morbleu! Parbleu!

And so he got to Moscow. They made the place too hot for him. For they set fire to Moscow; To get there had cost him much ado, And then no better course he knew. While the fields were green and the sky-was blue, Morbleu d'arbleu! Than to march back again from Moscow The Russians they stuck close to him, All on the road from Moscow; There was Tomazow and Jemalow, And all the others sharend in ou; Rajefsky and Noverefsky, And all the others that end in cfsky: Schamschoff, Souchosaneff, and Schepe

And all the others that end in A.; Wasil schikoff, Kostomareff, and T. og lokoff.

And all the others that end in off; Milaradovitch, and Jaladovitch, and Karatchkowitch, And all the others that end in itch; Oscharoffsky, and Rostoffsky, and Kazatichkoffsky, And all the others that end in offsky; And last of all an Admiral came. A terrible man with a terrible name, A name which you all must know very well. Nobody can speak and nobody can spell; And Platon he played them off, And Markoff he mark'd them off. And Tutel.koff he touch'd them off, And Kutusoff be cut them off. And Woronzoff he worried them off. And Dochtoroff he doctor'd them off.

And Rodinoff he flogg'd th They stuck close to them w might, They were on the left and Behind and before, and by da night; Nap would rather parleyvous than fight; But parley yous would no more do, Morbleu! Parbleu!

For they remember'd Moscow. And then came on the frost and snow, All on the road from Moscow! The Emperor Nap found as he went, That he was not quite omnipotent; And worse and worse the weather grew The fields were so white and the sky so blue, Morbleu! Ventrebleu! What a terrible journey from Moscow The devil take the hind st. All on the road from Moscow! Quoth Nap, who thought it small de light, To fight all day and to freeze all night

And so not knowing what else to do When the fields were so white and the sky so blue.

Morbleu! Parbleu! He stole away, I tell-you true, All on the road from Moscow. 'I was as much so cold upon the road, As it was too best Moscow: But there is a place which he must go

Where the fire is red and thebrimstone blue.

Morbleu! Parbleu! He'll find it hotter than Moscow.

From the National Intelligencer.

Our readers have all seen the account of the enterprize against the Pirates of Barratara. But few, we believe, were informed of the situation, history or nature of that establishment. For the information of such as were unacquainted with it, we have procured from a friend the following interesting narrative, of the main facts which he has it by a strong military force.

personal knowledge, and which can-nograil to interest all our readers : BARRATARA.

Is a bayou, or a narrow arm of the Gulf of Mexico, It runs through a rich but very flat sountry, until it reaches within a mile or two of the Mississippi river, fifteen miles be-low the city of New-Orleans.

This bayou has branches almost innumerable, in which persons can lie concealed from the severest scru tiny. It communicates with three lakes which lie on the southwest side. and these with the lake of the same name, & which lies contiguous to the sea, where there is an Island formed by the two arms of this lake and the sea. The east and west points of this Island were fortified in the year 1811, by a band of pirates, under the command of one Monsieur La Fitte. A large majority of these out-laws are of that class of the population of the state of Louisiana who fied from the Island of St. Domingo during the troubles there, and took refuge in the Island of Cuba. And when the last war between France and Spain commenced, they were compelled to leave that Island with the short notice of a few days. Without ceremony, they entered the United States, the most of them the state of Louisiana, with all the negroes they had possessed in Cuba .-They were notified by the governor of that state of the clause in the onstitution which forbade the importation of staves; but, at the same time, received the assurance of the governor that he would obtain, if possible, the appropation of the general government for their retaining this property. The conduct of this part of the favored emigrants and the refusal or those who could not from local causes join in the il icit confederacy to obey the draft n trat state, which was required by the general government and ordered by the state herself, prove the fidelity of the allegiance which was promised by these fugitives to the United States. The Island of Barratura is situated about lat. 29 deg. 15 min. long. 92, 30, and is as remarkable for its health as for the superior scale and shell fish with which its watersabound .- The chie of this horde, like Charles De Moor, had mixed with his many vices some transcendent virtues. In the year 1813, this party had, rom its turpitude & boldness, claimed the attention of the governor of Louis ana, and to break up the estublishment, he thought proper to strike at the head. He therefore offered a reward of 500 dollars for the head of Monsieur La Fitte, who was well known to the inflabitants of the city of New Orleans, from his immediate connection, and his ence having been a fencing master in that city of great reputation, which art he learnt in Buonaparte's army, where he was a captain. The reward which was offered by the governor for the head of La Fitte, was answered by the offer of a re-from the latter d $ 5000 for end of the governor. The goernor ordered out a company to march from the city to La Fitte's Island, and to burn and destroy all the property, and to bring to the ciof New Orleans all his barditti. This company under the command of a man who had been the intimate associate of this bold captain, approached very near to the fortified Island before he saw a man or heard a sound until he heard a whistle, not unlike a boatswain's call. Then it was he found himself surrounded by armed men who had emerged from the secret avenues which led into this bayou. Here it was that this modern Charles de Moor developed his few noble traits; for to this man. who had come to destroy his life and al! that was dear to him, he not on ly spared his life, but offered him that which would have made the honest soldier easy for the remainder of his days, which was indignantly refused. He then with the approbation of his captor, returned to the city. This circumstance, and some concomitant events, proved that this band of pirates were not to be taken by land. Our naval force having always been small in that quarter, exertions for the destruction of this illicit establishment could not be expected from them until augmented; for an officer of the navy, with most of the gun-boats on that station had to retreat from an overwhelm ing force of La Fitte's. So soon as the augmentation of the havy authorised an attack, one was made, the overthrow of this banditti has been the result; and now this almost invulnerable point and key to New-Orleans is clear of an enemy, it is to be hoped the government will hold

That the condition of this state emands the most serious attention f the legislature. We lately enyed, in common with the other nembers of the national confederay, the blessings of peace. The indistry of our citizens, in every department of active life, was abunlantly rewarded. Our cities and flages exhibited indications of inreasing wealth, and the foreign retions of the union secured our safeand nourished our prosperity.

The scene is now reversed. re summoned to the field of war, and to surrender our treasures for our defence. The fleets of a powrful enemy hover on our coasts, blockade our harbors and threaten our towns and cities with fire and desolation. When a commonwealth suddenly falls from a state of high prosperity it behaves the guardians of its interests to inquire into the causes of its by th decline, and with deep solicitude, to seek a remedy. In the latter part of the last century, a spirit of daring enterprizeimpatient of restraint-regardless of the sanctions of religion-hostile to human happiness and aspiring to supreme power-overturned many ancient governments, made Europe a scene of carnage, and threatened with ruin all that was valuable in the civilized world. The history of its as s progress and decline is familiar to every mind. Nations without the reach of the immense physical power which it embodied, were tainted by and its corruptions; & every state & province in Christendom has felt its of baleful influences. By the pure principles inherited from our fathers, conducive at once, to the preservation of liberty and order, this. state has been eminently exempt, in its interior policy, from the modern scourge of nations. In thus withstanding this potent adversary of ail acient establishments, while many monarchies have been subverted, we have exhibited to the world the highest evidence, that a free constitution is not inconsistent with the strength of civil government, and that the servative of both. Occupying a comparatively small territory and naturally associating, during the revolutionary war, with states whose views were identified with ours, our interests and inclinations led us, to unite in the great national compact, since defined and consolidated by the constitution of the U. States. We had justly anticipated, from that union, the pre-servation and advangement of our dearest rights and interests; and while the Father of his country, and those other great and wise men, who mindful of their high duties, and regardless of local and party considerations, consulted the happiness of the commonwealth—guided our councils, we were not disappointed in our expectations. The federal government, in which our venerable statesmen were conspicuous, was revered in every nation. An American, in foreign lands, was honored for his country's sake.
