GRAND BALL On board the United States Ship Superior, at Sackett's Harbour. Watertown, March 3.

A most splendid ball was given on board the United States Ship Superior, on the first inst. by the wardroom officers of that ship. That fine vessel was fitted up for the occasion in a style o' uncommon elegance and taste. Never did I behold a more brilliant scene than was presented on the upper deck of that ship on that night of gladness and festivity. A most spacious and elegant room was formed by means of canvass, which, being lined by the various flags and signals of the fleet, gave it an air of magnificence and splendor seldom surpassed. It was illuminated in a style of peculiar brilliancy by upwards of two hundred wax candles, many of them so placed in the guns of the marines as to reflect the brightest light from their polished surfaces; and other decorations, most appropriately selected and judiciously placed, were displayed in various parts of the room.

In fact, the whole preparations and arrangements were such as to do the nighest credit to the taste and talents of the young gentlemen who compose the wardroom of that ship There was a richness, a neatness and an elegance about the supper, which was truly astonishing. considering it was on board a vessel in a remote section of the country, till lately almost unknown, and now but badly supplied with a market .-The company consisted of about 300 of whom about 100 were ladies, collected from the flourishing villages of Watertown, Brownville and Sackett's Harbor. The whole world may be challenged to produce another instance of a country so new, so remote, so lately a howling wilderness, exhibiting such an assem-blage of beauty, fashion and taste, as the ladies presented on this occasion. This may be deemed flattery. or boasting, in a resident of the country, but the writer of this appeals to the gentlemen present from almost all parts o the United States in vouch for the truth of the assertion. They were honoured by the presence of the commo lore's lady, as a compliment to whom, at this moment of joy, prace and hi arity, the ball was given. With the exception of two or three other instances of distinguished females. from abroad, the ladies were selected from the above villages.

The music was of the most exquisite kind. A band of near thirty. with almost every species of sweettoned instruments, sent forth such music as cheered every heart, and brightened every countenance-

-" All things above, and beneath, and around, Seem'd a world of bright vision floating in sound." It was truly delightful and heart cheering to behold such a scene of joy and gladness, of harmony and felicity, of gaiety and elegance, or taste, intelligence and fashion, at a place where for almost three years past, nothing has been heard but the din of arms, the roar of cannon, the noise of war, and the cry of battle. Instead of those disturbed and hostile feelings towards the enemy which war engenders, particularly when near, there was but one uni versal sentiment of the most liberal & friendly feelings towards our late enemies on the other side of the lake, and all united in the noble and get nerous declaration of the commodore, in wishing some of their gallant spirits present to unite in the felicities of the occasion. The company separated at an early bour, and nothing occurred to lesson the general joy and satisfaction-

FORT ST. PHILIP. Copy of a letter from Major Overton, commanding Fort St. Philip during the late bombardment of it, to Maj. Gen. Jackson. Fort St. Philip,

Jan. 19, 1815. On the 1st of the present month I received the information that the

the destruction of New-Orleans. To effect this with more facility, they were first with their heavy pomb-vessels to bombard this place of this information, Frurned my attention to the security of my command. I erected small magazines in different parts of the garrison, that if one blew up I could resort to another; built covers for my men to secure them from the explosion of the shells, and removed the combustible matter without the work. Early in the day of their 8th inst. I was advised of the approach, and on the 9th at a quarter past 10 A. M. have in sight two bomb-vessels, one sloop, one brig and one schooner; they anchored two and a quarter miles below at half past eleven, and at half past twelve they advanced two barges apparently for the purpose of sounding within one and a half miles of the Fort; at this moment I ordered my water battery under the command of Lieut. Cunningham, of the Navy, to open on them, its well directed shot caused a precipitate retreat-At half past three o'clock, P. M. the enemy's bomb-vessels opened their fire from four sea mortars, two of thirteen inches, two of ten, and to my great mortification I found they were without range of my shot as many subsequent experiments proved; they continued their fire with little intermission during the 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th .-I occasionally opened my batteries on them with great vivacity, particularly when they shewed a disposition to change their position. On the 17th in the evening our heavy mortar was said to be in readiness. I ordered that excellent officer Cap tain Wolstonecraft of the Artillerists, who previously had charge of it, which was done with great effect, as the enemy from that moment became disordered, and at day light on the 18th commenced their retreat, after having thrown upwards of a thousand heavy shells besides small shells from Howitzers, round and grape, which he discharged from boats under cover of the

Our loss in this affair has been uncommonly small, owing entirely to the great pains that was taken by the different officers to keep their men under cover : as the enemy left scarcely ten feet of this garrison untouched. .

The officers and soldiers through this whole affair, although nine days and nights under arms in the different batteries, the consequent fatigue and loss of sleep, have manifested the greatest firmness and the most zealous warmth to be at the enemy. To distinguish individuals would be a delicate task, as merit was conspicuous every where. Lieut. Cunningham of the Navy w ho command. ed my water battery, with his brave crew, evinced the most determined bravery and pacommon activity throughout; and in fact, sir, the only thing to be regretted is that the enemy was too timid to give us an opportunity of destroying him.

I herewith enclose you a list of the killed and wounded. I am, sir, very respectfully. W. II, OVERTON.

The provinces are governed by Beys or Viceroys, as desforce has seldom exceeded 6000 men. The naval furce is more respectable. It has usually consisted of 5 of 0 frigates, with smaller vessels. The present force is said to be 5 frigates from 38 to 50 guns each, Grorvettes and brigs, mounting each 20 guns or more, and 6 or 8 gun boats, manned by between 3 and 4000 men,

The Barbary States commenced their piratical practices early în the 16th century. Haruc and Hayradin, sons of a potter in the island of Lesbos, having runaway from their father and become pirates, under the name of friends of the sea, assembled so many followers, and were so successful in their depredations, that their names became terrible from the streights of the Dardanelles to those o Gibralta r. They were each called Barbarossa, from the red colour of their beards. They first carried their prizes into the Barbary ports, by which those towns were greatly enriched. In process of time the king of Algiers applied to the elder Barbarossa for assistance, to subdue a fort which the Spaniards had built near, their capital. Under pretence of furnishing this assistance, he marched into Algiers with 5000 troops, jook forcible possession of the town, murdered the monarch, and caused himself to be proclaimed king. He continued his depredations on the trade of all christian nations, and greatly increased his power. His brother Barbarossa who succeeded him, by treachery and with the assistance of the Grand Seignior Solyman, became master of Tunis. Here his power become very formidable; but the emperor Charles V. of Germany, fitted out a fleet of 500 vessels, having on board 50,000 regular troops, took the Goletta which protected the harbor by storm, subdued an immense army which Barbarossa had assembled, released 2000 christian slaves, and restored the son of the former king to the

The government of Algiers devolved on Hascen-Aga, who continued with great activity the piratical depredations on the christian states. Charles took the resolution of subduing also this freebooter. He assembled a force of 20,000 foot and 2000 horse, mostly veteran troops; beside 3000 volunteers inciuding the flower of the Spanish and Italian nobility, and a thousand soldiers under one of the most gallant knights of Malta. This force he commanded in person. The voyage to the African coast was tempestuous, and as he approached the shore, the roll of the sea would not permit the troops to land. At last he succeeded in gaining the shore. and marched towards the town of Algiers. To oppose this mighty army Hascen had only 800 Turks and 5000 Moors; yet returned an inso-lent answer to the summons of surrender.

On the second day after the landing of the army, the clouds began to gather, and the heavens to assume a threatening aspect. At night the rain began to fall in torrents, accompanied with violent wind. The soldiers had landed without tents or provisions, and had nothing to cover them or to appeare their hunger. Their camp was overflowed with water, at every step they took they sunk to their ankles in mud-they could not lie down, and they could hardly stand against the impetuosity of the tempest, which assailed them with wind, rain, and hail. As the morning dawned, they were attacked by the Turks and Moors, who sallied; dryand vigorous from their conflirtable quarters, and they were hardly capable of resistance sunk as they were in the mire, exhausted with hunger, cold and fatigue, and blinded by the storm; their powder wet, and their mutches extinct. It was no sooner broad day, the hurricane having abated none of its violence, than the sea opened to their sight, agitated with all the rage of which that element is capable; all the ships on which the subststence of the army depended were driver from ther anchors some beatere la
