MARYLAND GAZETTE.

ANNAPOLIS, THURSDAY APRIL 27, 1815

COMMUNICATED.

OBITUARY.

Departed this life, on Sunday evening last, Mrs. Mary Robson,lict of Col. Elijah Robson, in the 24 year of her age. Society will greatly deplore the loss of this excellent lady, whose life has been so exemplary in religion, piety, and industry. Placed in a situation of comfort and independence, to the poor and sick in distress her benevolent and bountiful hand knew no rest: As a neighbour and friend she was justly held in the highest estimation; as a parent she was tender, careful and full of love; as a relation she was fond, kind and affectionate, and as a mistress she was remarkable for her provident management and kindness. Her venerable mansion, situated on the public road from the Severn Ferry to Annapolis, was always a receptacle for the wearied traveller; it was under her roof they found repose; it was there the ministers of the gospel, of every denomination, found asylum; no person entered her mansion that she did not give them food, clothing, and a comfortable bed; and she never failed to provide for the necessities of the poor. She was a true friend to the oppressed, and her spirit will be missed by all who knew her. She died on the 24th inst. at 10 o'clock, and was buried in the morning at 10 o'clock, in the presence of a large number of friends. Her funeral was attended by a large number of friends, and was conducted with the usual solemnities. Her remains were deposited in the vault of her husband, in the presence of a large number of friends. TAXES.

On pig iron, per ton, one dollar and fifty cents.
On castings of iron, per ton, one dollar and fifty cents.
On bar iron, per ton, one dollar.
On rolled or slit iron, per ton, one dollar.
On nails, brads, and sprigs, more than those usually denominated wrought, per pound, one cent.
On candles of white wax, or of any other white and other wax, per pound, five cents.
On mould candles of tallow, or of wax other than white, or in part of each, per pound, three cents.
On hats and caps, in the whole or in part of leather, wool or furs, hannahs, in whole or in part of wool or furs, if above two dollars in value, 8 per centum ad valorem.
On hats of chip of wood, covered with silk or other materials, or not covered, if above two dollars in value, 8 per centum ad valorem.
On umbrellas and parasols, if above the value of two dollars, 8 per centum ad valorem.

On paper, three per centum ad valorem.
On playing and visiting cards, five per centum ad valorem.
On saddles and bridles, six per centum ad valorem.
On boots and booters, exceeding five dollars per pair in value, five per centum ad valorem.
On beer, ale, and porter, 6 per centum ad valorem.
On tobacco, manufactured segars and snuff, twenty per centum ad valorem.
On leather, including therein all hides and skins, whether tanned, tawed, dressed or otherwise made on the original manufacture thereof, five per centum ad valorem.
These reader, you have a fine list of taxes indeed. The tax upon the articles of iron alone, in the various ways in which it is taxed, amounts to twenty four dollars and 50 cents per ton! But these taxes are not all. There is the land tax—the stamp tax—the tax on distilled spirits—the carriage tax—tax on all gold and silver ware, paste work and jewellery; tax on gold and silver watches; fifty per cent on postage—one hundred per cent on sales at auction, addition to former duties, &c. &c. whether we till our land, read by candle light, wear a hat, ride in a carriage, on saddles, or walk on foot, drive a nail, drink a glass of beer, or take a game of whist to wear off the dull hours, that even our watches tell us are taxed, we must be taxed and tortured by the thoughts of the collector. No; there is nothing we can do, and nothing that we can see, but what brings to our minds these odious taxes. And while thinking of these taxes, which must of course employ the most of our time, let us not forget to remember the accused war which has made these taxes necessary, and the men that made the war.

To Jurors & Witnesses.

Thus do we sum up the amount of debt that has been accumulating upon the nation, under this reign of democracy, while the people have been quietly dreaming all well—viz:

Old Debt, before the war,	$37,905,183
New Debt, liquidated,	49,780,222
Loans,	80,952,800
Treasury Notes,	48,500,000
Total,	217,138,205

That is to say in round terms; Two Hundred and Seventeen Millions, One Hundred and Thirty Eight Thousand, Two Hundred and Five Dollars.

Evidence of the deaf and dumb.
Thomas Pollock was indicted for breaking open the house of William Green, and stealing therein a watch and silver spoons the property of Joseph Mason. This trial was rendered peculiarly interesting by the examination of a boy who was deaf and dumb, the principal evidence in this case. Henry Noel, the deaf and dumb boy, appeared to be about 12 years of age, and had been in the Institution for educating poor children laboring under such infirmities for eighteen months. His interpreter stated, that he was not yet perfect in his knowledge of language. He was, however, able to make himself intelligible to the teachers in the institution, and in a great measure to strangers, by his action and the expression of his countenance. The evidence was gone through with as much facility as if the witness spoke. The boy gave the court to understand that he did not know the meaning of the word "oath," but that he perfectly comprehended the difference between right and wrong. Upon being asked what would be the consequence of telling a lie, he shrugged up his shoulders and pointed to the ground with an expression that rendered his meaning intelligible to all. Having been told to keep such a terror in view in the story he was about to tell, he proceeded in his statement. He was standing near the window of the prosecutor, looking at the various objects that presented themselves. Something prompted him, but he did not know what, to look into the prosecutor's parlor through the window. He knew that the prosecutor was from home, and having observed that a man was in her room kept his eye on him, and saw him take a watch from the chimney piece, and several spoons from the drawers.

Some of the articles he pocketed, and some he carried in his hand. The witness minutely described the different parts of the property, and the manner in which the prosecutor disposed of each of them about his person; he also described the hurried and anxious look of the prisoner while he was taking the articles, from which the witness concluded that what he was doing was criminal. He ran home, and communicated to his mother what he had seen, and having marked the prisoner, watched for him in the neighbourhood, where he soon saw him walking about as if nothing had happened. What the interpreter called the Manual Alphabet was one of the means by which the boy became intelligent and intelligible, but that by which he generally and most forcibly expressed himself was the countenance.

The Judge observed, that the clear manner in which the evidence of the deaf and dumb boy was expressed to the Court, coinciding with the rest of the evidence in all the material particulars, was such as he conceived was entitled to a very strong degree of credit. He at the same time stated, that the Jury must either find the prisoner guilty of the burglary as well as robbery, or acquit him of both. The deaf and dumb boy was not sworn. Verdict—Not Guilty.
