Heat Durably Fertilizes Land.
In the 3d vol. of "Memoirs of the Philadelphia Society for promoting Agriculture," page 214 &c. there is a communication from Judge Peters, entitled, "Salutary effects of Fire on soils."

In the same volume, page 539, there is a quotation from Virgil's Georgics, which shows that this mode of fertilizing land was well known to the ancients; and that it is not owing to the ashes, but to the effects of the fire, the lands are thus benefited.

Extract from Evans' and Ruff's Farmer's Journal, Aug. 29, 1814.
This publication is of great credit and authority.

"We observe in a late Monthly Publication, a Report of an experiment made by Mr. John Bower, of Hunster; an experiment interesting both to the Philosopher and to the Agriculturist. Observations had for several years induced this gentleman to suppose, that one of the most effectual means of recovering the fertility of a worn out soil, was to restore it to its latent heat; and he resolved to put this opinion to the test."

when the other parts of the soil are parched and dry, this appears as if newly watered. Mr. Bower made some of his remarks many years ago, upon a field where the stubble happened to get on fire, and burnt over the whole surface; and communicated an energy to the succeeding crops for many years."

JAMES IRVING.

The negro Caesar's Cure for poison.

Take the roots of plantane or wild hoare-hound, fresh or dried, three ounces; boil them together in two quarts of water, to one quart, and strain it.

During the cure, the patient must live on a spare diet, and abstain from eating mutton, pork, butter, or any other fat or oily food.

N. B. The plantane or hoare-hound will either of them cure alone, but they are more efficacious together.

In summer you may take one handful of the roots and branches of each, in place of 3 ounces of the roots of each.

For drink during the Cure. Take of the root of golden rod, six ounces, or in summer two large handfuls of the roots and branches together, and boil them in 2 quarts of water to one quart, (to which also may be added, a little hoare-hound and sassafras.)

When an inward fever attends such as are poisoned.

Take a pint of wood-ashes and three pints of water; stir and mix them well together; let them stand all night; and strain or decant the lye off in the morning; of which ten ounces may be taken 6 mornings following, warmed or cold according to the weather.

These medicines have no sensible operation, tho' sometimes they work in the bowels, and give a gentle stool.

The symptoms attending such as are poisoned. A pain of the breast, difficulty of breathing, a load at the pit of the stomach, an irregular pulse, burning and violent pains of the viscera above and below the navel, very restless at night, sometimes wandering pains over the whole body, retching and inclination to vomit, profuse sweats, (which proves always serviceable,) slimy stools; both when costive and loose, the face of a pale and yellow colour, sometimes a pain and inflammation of the throat, the appetite generally weak, and some cannot eat at all; those who have been long poisoned are generally very feeble, and weak in their limbs, sometimes spit a great deal, the whole skin peels, and likewise the hair falls off.

Cesar's Cure for the bite of a rattlesnake.

Take of the roots of plantane or hoare-hound, (in summer roots and branches together,) and a sufficient quantity; bruise them into a mortar, and squeeze out the juice, of which, as soon as possible, use one spoonful; if he is swelled, you must force it down his throat. This generally will cure; but if the patient finds no relief in an hour after, you may give another spoonful, which never fails.
