

POETS CORNER.

If the following impromptu merits the notice of the editor of the Maryland Gazette, he is at liberty to insert it in his paper.

On presenting to a Young Lady some early Violets.

Regret not, little Violets sweet, An early fate that thus ye meet; Ere yet your fragrant petals fade, Hie ye to the beautiful maid; One moment in her bosom bloom, And yours will be an envied doom!

MARY.

Mr. Green.—Should you, thro' lack of more important things, have a vacant corner in your paper, you may amuse your readers with the following pieces which have been lying by me for some months.

TO LOVE.

Must I, so early, bid adieu To thee, and all thy bland enchantments? Just when I thought I had in view, The goal where shone such sweet allurements.

Must I abandon every thought, Of her, who to my soul's most dear? O! can I from my bosom, fraught With all thy fires, her image tear?

The trial tho' severe it be, Tho' I should read each silken tie That renders life endeared to me— To tear her from my heart I'll try!

Oh! love, who wilt thou still remain, When every gleam of hope is gone; Delight to fill the soul with pain— Is pity to thy name unknown?

Far hence fond Love, for Chloe's given, No person to believe that thou Hast never to her bosom driven.

A dart like that which I feel now! Forever love from me depart: Yes, leave this ardent breast of mine, Thou never more wilt pierce my heart.

Malignant boy, still in my shrine! Yet, little spite, still in my heart: And when, on memory's wings I fly, Back to those thoughts, oh! still too dear.

Some soft, assuaging balm apply! And let those thoughts as gently steal, As those that fondlest, tenderest dreams Upon the memory's tablets seal, Unto my soul in gentlest streams!

Let chaste'd rays of fond regret, Sometimes revisit this lone breast, And, tho' I cannot, yet, oh let The dearest girl be fondly blest!

On hearing a lady play upon a Piano.

Oh! lady, move once more the strain That stole upon my ravish'd ear; Recalling to my soul with pain, Past scenes that to my heart were dear!

Oh! fair, Chloe wak'd the string, That thriv'd those notes along the air, Which bore them on its treazy wing, And waded them with tender care,

While Angels, listening to the spheres, As on the dulcet numbers floated, Prefer'd dear Chloe's strains to theirs, And to their bowers the music courted!

So like to her's thy madd'ning strains, That had not love long left my heart, I might again have borne those chains, That more of grief than bliss impart!

So long I've trod the path of love, Encount'ring thorns, I've wary grown: And now, determin'd free to rove, No more I'll bow to beauty's throne.

HENRY.

OBITUARY.

Died.—At Calais, in poverty and exile, the once celebrated Lady Hamilton, relict of sir Wm. Hamilton. Her origin was most humble; she is said to have been the daughter of a cottager, in the forest of Bere, in Hampshire, and to have first attracted the notice of Lord Halifax, Enma Hart, for this was her parental name, experienced in early life all those vicissitudes which too generally attend those females whose beauty has betrayed them into vice, and who unhappily depend upon it for subsistence. On her arrival in the metropolis she was for some time in a menial capacity, and it is also said about the year 1782 she personated the Goddess of Health, at the infamous establishment of Dr. Graham in Pall Mall. The personal charms which nature had so profusely bestowed began also to attract the notice of the artists, and the late Mr. Romney in particular, who felt a stronger admiration for her than what he might be supposed to entertain merely as a painter, made her the frequent subject of his pencil. Her "Attitudes," drawn at a later period by Mr. E. Reckberg, an eminent German artist, and engraved by Pirroli of Naples, are well known. She lived for some years under the protection, as it is termed, of the late R. Hon. Charles Greville, by whom she was recommended, about 1788, to his uncle, sir W. Hamilton, and the latter was so well satisfied that he soon afterwards married her. At Naples, when sir William filled the post of British ambassador, his lady by her talents and assiduity found means to recommend herself so strongly to the king and queen, that she soon became a great favourite, particularly with the latter. Under the difficult circumstance which arose out of the invasion of Naples by the French, and the expulsion of the royal family from its continental dominions, Lady Hamilton is allowed to have exhibited extraordinary promptitude, energy and presence of mind. It was during her residence at this court, in 1798, that her friendship with Nelson commenced, which must be admitted to have reflected very little credit upon either. After the death of Sir Wm. Hamilton, 1803, his lady resided entirely with her gallant admirer at his mansion at Merton, which, with the estate, he bequeathed to her by his will, and committed to her care a young lady, the secret of whose birth yet remains to be explained. Providence in pecuniary matters was not a quality of Lady Hamilton; Merton Place was soon sold, and for some years she was confined to the rules of the king's bench, till about 12 months since she was released, as it is said, through the intercession of an alderman of the city of London, who made himself responsible for the debt for which she was detained, and thus enabled her to remove to the continent. The recent publication of letters, many of them extremely gross, addressed to her by Lord Nelson and some other eminent characters, if it were proved to have been directed by her, is a greater breach of decorum than any part of her former conduct; and though she has denied any participation in this affair, and asserted that the letters were surreptitiously obtained by the publisher, yet there is too much reason to suspect that necessity induced her to give to the world, what the slightest regard for her own character, and for that of her renowned admirer, would have taught her to veil in impenetrable obscurity.

MARYLAND GAZETTE EXTRA.

ANNAPOLIS: FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1.

BOSTON, AUGUST 26.

From the Providence American.

LATEST FROM GIBRALTAR. Arrived here last evening, brig Brazillian, Snow, in 42 days passage from Gibraltar. We were particularly favoured with the following interesting intelligence, by an intelligent gentleman, passenger in the Brazillian.

The American squadron fell in with the Algerine frigate Messoda, of 46 guns, and from 4 to 600 men, of Cape de Gal. She was engaged by the Guerriere alone, and after an action of one hour and an half was captured by her; the Messoda had 24 killed and 24 wounded; the Guerriere had 7 wounded. They afterwards captured another frigate and a corvette off Cape Palos; the particulars of the action not stated.

The prizes were sent into Cartagena, but were ordered by the Spanish government to leave that place; in consequence of which they proceeded to Toulon. It was reported that another Algerine cruiser, a brig, had been spoken going to Toulon, a prize to the American squadron. It was confidently believed at Gibraltar, that the greatest part, if not the whole of the Algerine fleet, would be captured, as there were certain accounts of their being at sea, long after they passed the Straits, which preceded the American squadron only 48 hours.

There was another report in circulation, that the squadron had taken the second sea-port in Algiers, called Oran. Vessels which had arrived from the Straits brought various but confirmatory accounts of the probability of the entire capture of the Algerine fleet; but as they assert nothing particular as to actual capture, except those already mentioned, they are only entitled to the credit of plausible conjectures. The report of the capture of two frigates and the corvette was confirmed by a letter from Captain Lewis, of the Guerriere, to one of the American consuls in Spain, and by him communicated to Mr. Horatio Sprague, American commission merchant at Gibraltar.

The Dutch squadron consisting of 5 frigates and 1 sloop of war passed Gibraltar on the 5d of July, and it was presumed would form a junction with the Americans.

A large Swedish frigate came to anchor at Gibraltar on the 11th, bound up.

It was said she was the vanguard of a much larger force, to operate against the Algerines.

There were various reports respecting the number of American merchantmen captured by the Algerines since the war, but they originated more from conjecture than from any ascertained facts. It remains a question if they have captured one, except a Salem brig a great while since. The prisoners at Algiers were treated very well and not obliged to work being under the protection of the Swedish consul there, who allows them a monthly stipend by the authority of our government. Mr. Sprague had received a number of letters from capt. Smith of the Salem brig, who resides with the Swedish consul.

The last letter was from the mate, who in the absence of capt. Smith, (he having gone into the country on business of the consul) undertook to answer a letter from Mr. Sprague to him; it stated, that they were very well treated by the present Dey, and that he had no doubt that the moment the American fleet appeared off Algiers an immediate treaty would take place on the most reasonable terms to America.

On the arrival of a report of the death of Buonaparte on the 9th, a general feu de joye was fired from the principal batteries, from the top of the rock downwards, and two frigates under way in the harbour, fired their salutes in the style of a mock engagement, which produced a very noble effect.

New York, Aug. 22.

FROM ENGLAND.

By the fast sailing ship Governor Strong, Captain Scott, the editors of the New York Gazette have received regular files of London and Liverpool papers and Lloyd's list; from which they make some important extracts.

In a letter from capt. Maitland, of the Bellerophon, to his government, he says, that he explicitly stated to the count La Casces, that he had no authority whatever for
