

his council investigated him illegally to take from the treasury.

We will pass over the shameful falsehood of this passage, in asserting that the governor never did perform the military services for which he was paid, although he was notoriously in the actual command of the militia the whole time. We will say nothing of the assertion that he was not entitled to pay, although a committee of the House of Delegates, of which Mr. J. T. Mason, the great lawyer of the party, who would be a great lawyer in any party, was chairman, reported that there was no need of a law to enable the council to allow this pay, for which its authority under existing laws was amply sufficient; and we will barely notice the extreme modesty and consistency of this pecuniary in the mouth of the democratic party; a modesty and consistency of which two incidents in its history will enable us to judge.

Mr. King, the former minister of the U. S. to England, before he left that country, adjusted the business of the bank stock owned by this state in a manner as to secure this bank stock to the state. The arrangement was fully made by Mr. King, and this large property was secured to the state so by his exertions, and by the weight of his character, and the consideration which he had justly obtained in that country. Mr. Pinkney was then in England, in a subordinate though a respectable station; but he had no more to do in the affair than the man in the moon. The transfer however, though agreed on with Mr. King, was not actually made before he came away. Mr. Pinkney staid longer, and attended to the making of the transfer, which employed a few hours of his time, and detained him a week or two longer in England than he would otherwise have staid.

The democrats then in power in Maryland, gave Mr. Pinkney who had recently declared himself of their party, and was in high favour, the modest sum of 12,000 dollars for his service. There was another favourite to be gratified and rewarded, and the same affair of the bank stock afforded a snug job for him. Mr. Nicholson had been zealous and useful to the party, and he was not rich. A law was therefore passed appointing a special agent to receive this bank stock from Mr. Pinkney, & transfer it to the treasurer, instead of directing Mr. Pinkney to transfer it to the treasurer at once. A commission amounting to upwards of 6000 dollars was allowed to this commissioner. Mr. Nicholson was appointed, he did the business, which required five minutes, and consisted in writing his name twice or three times, for which he received his 6000 dollars.

Thus were eighteen thousand dollars given as gratifications, to two favourites of the party; and by that party which now raises an outcry, and talks of "the plunder of the public Treasury of upwards of Sixteen Hundred Dollars," because that sum was paid to the Governor for services of many months as Commander in Chief of the Militia, which it is perfectly notorious that he performed, and for which one of the first lawyers of the State, a most zealous member of the party, officially reported that the Council had authority by law to order payment.

So much for democratic economy and care of the Treasury. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Hear the handbill again. "They have violated the most sacred principles of military usage; by appointing Mr. Harper, a mere private citizen, Major General over the head of a brave officer of the revolution, who had long been a Brigadier General." &c. And who appointed Gen. Stansbury, a mere private citizen, to be a Brigadier General, over the heads of all the Colonels of his regiment? Who appointed Generals Nelson, Swearingen, Ringgold and Montgomery in the same manner from the ranks?

"Cast out first the beam that is in thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote that is in thy brother's eye." The truth is, and the writer of this handbill well knew, that military promotion, in the rank of general officers, is never made by succession and seniority, but by election. This is the rule in the regular service, as every body knows. It was constantly acted on during the late war. That it has long been the rule in the militia is proved by the practice of the democrats, in the five instances noticed above. Yes, these men fix the criterion to complain of the violation of "the most sacred principles of military usage," by the appointment of Mr. Harper. The derangement of "the volunteer system of Baltimore" by this appointment, is an impudent falsehood. Every body knows that the volunteer system was not in the slightest degree deranged or affected, and that the volunteers, on the contrary, were very well pleased with the appointment.

It would have been more creditable to Gen. Stricker's patriotism, if he had been less punctilious, and had remained at his post till the danger was over, instead of quitting it in the middle of the war, on a point of etiquette, in which he was clearly in the wrong.

Let us return once more, and for the last time, to the handbill. After a long and doleful enumeration of the evils which the people of Maryland are to suffer, from federal domination, it goes on thus:

"You will see your boasted declaration of Independence burnt by the hands of the common hangman" (by order of the federalists we suppose, who had infinitely the greatest share in the dangers sufferings and services by which this Independence was achieved) "and you will see the names of your beloved Washington, and of all that band of heroes and patriots who fought for American liberty, (nine tenths of those who remain are federalists) branded and stigmatized with the opprobrious epithets of rebels and traitors."

Let it be remembered that every one of them who held an office by the appointment of Washington, when the democrats came to power, and who had not joined their party, was turned out to starve, and in many instances to make way for Tories and British refugees, recently converted to democracy.

After reading this hypocritical and disgusting cant, about "your beloved Washington," from the mouths of his enemies and traducers, read the following notice published in the Aurora, then and ever since the favorite paper of the democratic party, and published too on the day after Washington retired from office. "With it we conclude this reply, and we think that it could not be concluded better. All the remaining lies in the handbill, and they are exactly as numerous as its statements, might be exposed with the same ease. But this will suffice.

The following wicked paragraph is taken from the Aurora, of March 6, 1797.

"Lord now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

Was the pious ejaculation of a man who beheld a flood of happiness rushing in on mankind—if ever there was a time that would license the reiteration of the exclamation, that time is now arrived, for the man who is the source of all the misfortunes of our country, is this day reduced to a level with his fellow citizens, and is no longer possessed of powers to multiply evils on the U. States. Over there was a period for rejoicing, this is the moment—Every heart in unison with the freedom and happiness of the people, ought to beat high with exultation, that the name of Washington from this day ceases to give currency to political iniquity, and to legalize corruption—A new era is now opening upon us, an era which promises much to the people, for public measures must now stand upon their own merits, and nefarious projects can no longer be supported by a name. When a retrospect is taken of the Washington administration for eight years, it is a subject of the greatest astonishment, that a single individual should have clobbered the principles of republicanism in an enlightened people just emerged from the gulph of despotism, and should have carried his designs against public liberty to the point of having put in jeopardy its very existence—Such, however, are the facts, and with these staring facts, this day ought to be a jubilee in the U. States."

LATE FROM EUROPE. New-York, Sept. 13.

This morning arrived at this port the August mail, H. B. M. Rolla, Robert Julian, esquire, commander. We are indebted to J. J. for a Halifax paper of the 1st inst, containing his latest news from England.

It will be seen, that Buonaparte, against his will, has been ordered to St. Helena, for which place he probably sailed on the 7th of August.

London paper observes, "A number of persons disposed to follow his fortunes, accompanied him to England, but were subsequently separated from him; and, it is said, some of them would be allowed to see him in his exile."

Plymouth, (Eng.) Aug. 5.

On Monday the future destination of Buonaparte was officially communicated to him and his general staff, by Lord Viscount Keith & Henry Bunbury, under secretary for the war department.

Each the deopot heard with grief, the most acute description, extending inarticularly that his wish had been and was to domicile in England, under any surveillance its government might think proper, but never would be carried to St. Helena alive, and publicly declaring rather than be removed from Bellerophon he would have himself shot through the head by his rivals. Magnanimous hero! If fond of dying, why did he not meet death in the field of battle, the most fertile field for the exit of a soldier.

The owner of the above described horse is requested to come forward and prove property, pay charges, and take him away. Aderton Sinner. August 31.

TAVERN. REZIN D BALDWIN. Respectfully informs the public, that he has opened a Tavern and Boarding House, at that well known stand occupied for many years by Captain James Thomas.
