

PORT'S CORNER.

THE RISING OF BABYLON.

From Byron's "Hebrew Melodies."
I.
Thee, whose spell can raise the dead,
Bid the Prophet's form appear,
"Samuel, raise thy buried head!
King! behold the phantom seer!
Earth yawn'd: he stood the centre of a cloud;
Light chang'd its hue, retiring from its shroud.
Earth stood all glazey in his fixed eye;
His hands were wither'd, and his veins were dry;
His foot, in bony whiteness, glitter'd
there,
Shrunken and sinewless, and ghastly fair;
From lips that mov'd not, and un-breathing frame,
Like carer'd winds the hollow accents came.
Saul saw, and fell to earth as falls the oak.
At once, and blasted by the thunder-stroke.

II.
"Why is my sleep disquieted?"
Who is he that calls the dead?
Is it thou, Oh King? Behold!
Headless are these limbs and cold;
They are mine; and such shall be Thine to-morrow, when with me;
Ere the coming day is done,
Such shalt thou be, such thy son.
Fare thee well, but for a day;
Then we mix our mould'ring clay.
Thou, thy race, the psie and low,
Pierc'd by shafts of mine a bow;
And the fletcher by thy side,
To thy heart, thy hand shall guide;
Crownless, breathless, headless fall, Sua undsire, the house of Saul!"

THE DESTRUCTION OF SENNA-CHERIE.

I.
The Assyrian came down like the wolf
on the fold,
And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;
And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea, When the blue wave rolls lightly on deep Galilee.

II.
Like the leaves of the forest when summer is green,
That host with their banners at sun set were seen;
Like the leaves of the forest when autumn hath blown,
That host on the morrow lay withered and sworn.

III.
For the Angel of death spread his wings on the blast,
And breathe in the face of the foes as he pass'd,
And the eyes of the sleepers wax'd dead in a chill,
And their hearts but once heaved, and for ever grew still!

IV.
And there lay the steed with his nostrils
all wide,
But through it there roll'd not the breath of his pride;
And the foam of his gasping lay white on the turf,
And cold as the spray of the rock, beat his surf.

V.
And there lay the rider distorted and pale,
With the dew on his brow, and the rust on his mail;
And the tents were all silent, the banners alone,
The lances unlifted, the trumpet un-blown.

VI.
And the widows of Ashur are loud in their wail,
And the idols are broke in the temple of Baal;
And the might of the Gentile, unsmote
by the sword, Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord!

ST. HELENA.

Which is said to be the future residence of Bonaparte, is an island in the South Atlantic ocean, held by the English East India Company. Its circumference is about twenty miles, and it has the appearance, at a distance, of a rock or castle, arising out of the ocean, being only accessible at one particular spot, where the town is erected, in a valley, at the bottom of a bay, between two steep dreary moun'ns. The buildings, both public and private, are plain but neat. It has some high mountains, particularly one called Diana's Peak, which is covered with woods to the very top. There are other hills also, which bear evident marks of a volcanic origin; and some have huge rocks of lava, and a kind of half vitrified flags. The country however, is far from being barren, the little hills are covered with rich verdure, and interspersed with fertile vallies, which contain gardens, orchards, and various plantations.
The vallies are watered by rivulets, and the mountains in the centre of the island, are covered with wood.

The soil which covers the rocks and the mountains, is in general, a rich mould, from six to ten inches deep, clothed with a variety of plants and shrubs. The walks of peach trees are loaded with fruit which have a peculiar rich flavor; but the European fruit trees and vines, which have been planted here, do not succeed. Cabbages and her greens, thrive extremely well, out are devoured by the caterpillars, as are the barley and other kinds of grain, by the rats, which are very numerous. The ground, for these reasons, is laid out chiefly in pastures, the verdure of which is surprising; and the island can support 5000 head of their small cattle.
They have English sheep here, and a small breed of horses, with goats and rabbits. The number of inhabitants on the island does not exceed 2000, including 500 soldiers, and about 600 slaves, who are supplied with all sorts of manufactures by the company's ships, in return for retreatments; and many of the slaves are employed in catching fish, which are very plentiful. This island is situated between the continents of Africa and S. America, about 1200 miles W. of the former, and 1500
E. of the latter.
