In short every thing we can collect from the Paris papers received this morning, would induce us to hope that peace has been signed. We believe the Sun is no better informed than ourselves on the subject. The opening of the Chambers on the 9th, will, most likely put all speculation to rest, and to that event we look with anxiety.

DUBLIN, Oct. 7. We have nothing further from Spain. On the late accounts we find some of our London cotemporaries indulging in profuse speculations. It is evident, however, that almost every assertion of which those accounts are composed wants confirmation.

The intentions with which Porlier was expected to leave Corunna, we knew by our former advices. He knew the importance of taking Santiago, situated a few leagues from immediate influence of Ferdinand, against whose oppression his projects were directed. This opulance arises out of the popular belief placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the battle of the placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the great miracle of Santiago having fought in the battle of the placed in the account. FROM SPAIN.

By the Mediterranean squadron at Gibraltar (Oct. 7) Spanish accounts have been received, which stated that in three of the most populous provinces in Spain the Revolutionists had collected a force of 25 or 30,000 men, and that gen. From a postscript to the Norfoll: Bea. con of Nov. 22. THE WASP SAFE!!!

A young gentleman in this borough who has a brother a Lieut. on board the Guerriere, and another a midshipman on board the Wasp received a letter yesterday from his mother at King's Creek, near Williamsburg; in which she announces the receipt of a letter from her son, the Lieut. of the Guerriere, informing her that he has heard from the Wasp; that she was on the coast of the Brazils.

[The source whence this comes is the most respectable.]

The following article is copied from a postscript to the Baltimore Patriot, of Saturday evening last. The Southern mail of vesterday does not bring any further information on the subject. For our own part, we think the story highly improbable. If any such affair had happened we should have heard of it long before this in a direct course. The L' Epervier, we believe, was despatched by Com. Decatur from the Mediterranean for this country, on or about the 9th of July, and if her loss had happened, in the way related below, some of the crew must have been saved to tell the tale of her loss. Almost five months have past away since her sailing withouthe least tidings of her. She must dispersed. FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT. Savannah Republican Extra, Nov. 17, 1815. REPORTED LOSS OF THE U.

S. BRIG L'EPERVIER. Capt. Smith of the ship Eliza Barker, arrived in this city last evening, from Turk's Island, which place he left on the 1st inst. reports that a few hours previous to his leaving that place, his agent came on board and informed him that by the arrival of an English vessel, inteiligence had been received of the sinking of the U.S. brig of war L'-

Epervier.

The circumstances related were, that the brig had fallen in with an English seventy-four, from which she was boarded. The boarding officer demanded Lieut. Shubrick's commission, which mandate was answered by remarking that the colours under which he sailed were the commission he bore; and that he had been despatched by Com. Decatur for the U. S .- The English officer returned to his commander and made his report; upon which he was ordered to board again the American vessel, which he did. He repeated his former demand, and received a similar reply; went to his own ship and communicated to his captain. In the mean time L'Epervier made sail, which the Eng. commander perceiving, fired a gun at her ; L'Epervier returned it; when the English seventy-four opened her broadside upon the brig and sunk her. Capt. Smith heard not whether any of the crew were saved, nor the time or latitude in which the atrocious transaction was perpetrated, but says the above report was commonly believed at Turks Island.

Should it prove true (which heaven forbid) that the blood of our countrymen has been shed by the hand of violence, we trust that there will be but one heart and one hand, in supporting the just rights and the honor of our country.

From a London Evening Paper. GEN. PORLIER .- The mail brought by the Speedy Packet, has arrived at Falmouth from Corunna, in two days and a half. The accounts thus furnished of the total failure of the expedition, correspond with those previously received, and, together with the particulars of Porlier's fate, are subjoined. Having been arrested by the subalterns of his own army on his march against Santiago, he was conveyed to Corunna where he was hung the 3d inst. without trial. Above 100 officers were under arrest, and the troops
