TO THE AFFLUENT. Assist them, hearts from anguish free, Assist them, sweet Humanity !

Ah? ye who meet stern Winter's frown Upheld by Fortune's powerful hand Who see the chilling snow fall down, With all her comforts at command

O! think of their less happy doom. Whom Poverty's sharp wees assail, No sparkling fire, no cheerful room, Revives their cheek, cold, wan & pale Deep howls the wind! the pelting rain Drips through the shatter'd easement cold. While the sad mother's arms contain Her infant shivering in their fold. In vain they raise their piteous cry,

And plead at hungry nature's call; Their only food a mother's sigh—
Their only warmth the tears that fall Stretch'd on his miscrable bed, The wretched father sinks in grief,

Pale -ckness rests upon his head,

And only hopes from death relief. The parent's tender mournful eyes Mingle their faint and humid beams Fresh wees from retrospection rise. Fresh source from memory's fountain streams.

O. Rich! the transports might be thine To soothe their sufferings into peace; To bid the sun of coinfort shine! And want's oppressive empire cease

To see the glow of health's return Reanimate their fade ! cheek ; Life's feeble spark rekindled burn. And give, what language cannot speak

On l'ancy's pinion oft I roam, With Pity, partner of my flight; Forget awhile that grief's my evn. And taste a soothing, sweet delight

Forget the many poignant woes, That weigh this drooping form to earth; Where restless sorrow hopes repose.

'Scap'd from those ills which gave it birth ! Oh! ve embark'd for Pleasure's shore

Restrain awhile the flattering sail! At Pity's call retard the oar. Nor let her praintive pleading fail !
