When winter has sprinkled his hoar-locks with And chili is the sigh of Ontario's billow.

That borsts from wave-heaten caverns below:
But colder's the eye' where no kindness fits hearning

NAPOLEON. REMEDY FOR THE GOUT. From the Belfast Commercial Chronicie, April 10.

It is well known that the Emperor Napoleon was an effective protector of all the arts and the sciences, but it is not so generally understood, that, whenever any important discovery was made, in any branch of art or science, he set negotiations on foot to purchase the secret of the invention, with a view to publish it in the Moniteur, not only for the benefit of France but of the world at large, The remedy for the gout, by Dr. Pradier, was then purchased by Napoleon, at the price of 2,500l, sterling, paid from his private purse, and the formula was immediately published in the Moniteur as follows: take-

Balm of Mecca six drachms Red Bark one ounce half an ounce Saffron Sarsaparilla one ounce Sage one ounce

Rect. spirits of wine three pounds Dissolve, separately, the balm of Mecca in one third of the spirits of wine; macerate the rest of the substances in the remainder, for fortyeight hours-filter and mix the two liquors. For use, the tincture obtained is mixed with twice or thrice the quantity of lime water; the bottle must be shaken, in order to mix the precipitate, settled to the bottom by standing.

The following is a mode of em ploying the remedy: A poultice must be prepared of linseed meal, which must be of a good consistency, and spread very hot, of the thickness of a finger on a napkin, so as to be able completely to surround the part affected; if it be required for both legse from the feet to the knees, it will take about three quarts of linseed meal. When the poultice is prepared and as hot as the patient can bear it, and about two ounces of the prepared liquor, must be poured equally over the whole of each, without its being imbibed; the part affected is then to be wrapped up in it, & bound up with flannel and bandages to preserve the heat. The poultice is generally changed every twenty-four hours, sometimes at the end of twelve.

It would be whimsical if the Prince Regent of England were to be cured of this tormenting & dangerous disease, by a remedy which he would be evidently indebted to the public spirit and liberality o Napoleon.

MARRIAGE SCHEME.

The following pleasant little story from the Petersburg Intelligencer, may relieve an idle moment, and possibly be productive of some good.

To the Editors of the Petersburg Intelligencer.

GENTLEMEN .- On the 21st day of Dec. last, I was passing through the state of South Cirolina, and in the evening arrived at the suburbs of the town of -, where I had an acquaintance on whom I called, I was quickly informed that the family was invited to a wedding at a neighbouring house, and on being requested I changed my clothes and on Dopt. Col. for the 1st and 2d Elect went with them. As soon as the young couple were married, the company was seated and a profour d silence ensued-(the man of the house was religious.) A young Lawyer then arose, and addressed the company very handsomely, and in finishing his discourse be ned leave to offer a new scheme of matrimony, which he believed and hoped would be beneficial. And on obtaining leave, he proposed :

That one min in the company should be selected as president; that this president should be duly sworn to keep entirely secret all the communications that should be forwarded to him in his official department that night; and that each unmarried entleman and lady in company should write his or her name on . piece of paper, and under it place the person's name who they wished to marry; then hand it to the president for inspection, and if any gentleman and lady had receprocally chosen each other the president was to inform each of the result : & those who had not been reciprocal in their choice should have their choice kept entirely secret.

After the appointment of the president, the communications were accordingly handed up to the chair, and it was found that twelve young gentlemen and ladies had made reciprocal choices; -- but who they had chosen, remained a secret to all but themselves and the president. The conversation changed and the company respectively retired.

Now hear the conclusion. I was passing through the same place on the 14th of March following, & was informed that eleven of the twelve matches had been solemnized, and that the young gentlemen of eight couples of the eleven, had declared that their diffidence was so great that they certainly should not have addressed their respective wives, if the above scheme had not been in troduced .- # Gentlemen under 20 and ladies under 15, were excluded as unmariageable.

Boston, July 5. Fishing extraordinary .- As a gentleman was augling last Thursday in the Mill Dam, Westchester, he accidently threw his line across - a strong white duck, which suddenly turning round, twisted the gut about her own neck, and fixed the hook of the dropper fly in her own breast. Thus entangled & hooked, she soon broke off the gut above the dropper, and sailed down the stream, with the end fly trailing behind her. She had not proceeded far before a trout apparently about 1 1-2lb. weight took the fly effectually. Then commenced a struggle the most extraordinary that ever was witnessedduck at the dropper, & a large trout at the end fly! Whenever the trout exerted itself the terrors of the duck were very conspicuous : it fluttered its wings and dragged the fish. In case of no violent struggles on the part of the trout, the duck evidently gave way, & suffered herself at last to be drawn under some bushes, where the shortness of the gut did not allow the trout to shelter himself in his retreat, and the duck to remain, on the surface at the same time. The duck's head was drawn repeatedly under water, by chance however, the gut got across a branch, which hung downwards into the water, and the duck taking advantage of the purchase which this gave her, dragged her opponent from his hole, and compelled him to shew his head above water. Then it became a contest of life or death; the trout was in the last agonies and the duck evidently in a very weak state, when the gut gave way, and suffered them to part each his own way.
