From the Domocratic Press. .. THE EXECUTION.

On Saturday morning last, about 9 o'clock, crostal began to assemble in the vicinity of the Bridge began to assemble in the vicinity of the Bridge began to assemble in the vicinity of the Bridge began to fee Richard Smith bromber for the traken, pursuant to sentence, to the filter of execution, to fusion death furthe morder of Cape John Carlon in the wents of January last. The crowd continued to increase, not only in the neighbourhood of the prison, but in the streets through which is was known he was to pass, until 15 minimus after to o'clock, when the gates of the prison on Sixth-street were thrown open, and also procession began to story for and the prison of the city and the prison of the control o On Saturday morning laft, about o o'clock the gares were thrown open and the care ap-praired, was of a character of melancholy not easily to be described. Currolly uself female huthed, not a found was heard, a folent, fi-lance pervaded the whole affembly. The maining hither and thither of boys, the pinhing of men, and crowding together of wo in en, was all over, and mothers prefied their little ones to sheir botoms with more than a risheria in sion lives. The care was driven by the executioner, a black man; Juft behind him and with his back fowards the horse, or action lear was placed the untuppy Smith, by him far the Hay. Mr. Hurley, the officiating minister of the Golpel, who had attended him fined his conviction. In the rear of the carr lat a confleman humanely volunteered to hold an umbrella over the heads of the clergyman and imbretia over the hearts of the chergyman und the polioner, to fletter them front the agreed a blazing lant. The prifoner was generally defield in a tlark blue freck coast and dark under clothes; the prieft fat with his head with healt inclining to the prifoner, who was into a finite, polition in relation to the prieft, and think descript intent upon the following elections, exercites they were reading the procession pealed through the multitude it moved with more than ordinary revailty for noty inflanting this interruptions inclined the convention from the start peaking with and a half, it exacted the place of exercition with more from the start is laid left the gast.

His crime was wholly forgotten or remem-bered but to be wept ober and forgiven. The trembling agitation of the almost exhausted Prict was evident; all that Christian Jove, and wore than ministerial duty had end med had been done; Hope was vivid for fath was in its fullness; yet human nature could hard-ly fullan the conflict of its own feelings, and it would have funk under the trial, had not fome friendly arm intervened, until the spirits rallied back to the heart and the load collecting all its energies, he poursed forth his last bleffing, with streaming eyes implored a last forgiveners, and straining the unhappy young must be helder the referential in the greater than the present the property of th man to his hofom, he refigned him to the merey of his Creator and fank in a flate of inten fivility into the arms of friends who bore him away. Some further particulars relative to the Execution of RICHARD SAITH

On Thursday night previous to the fatal day, the prisoner was extremely ill: whether it arose from heart-sick ness, or some other cause is not known probably, however, from the former. He had made three requests—one, to be executed on the prison wall-if that could not be granted, to be permitted to go to the place of execution in a carriage-and thirdly, to have the assur rance that he should be buried in some of the Christian burial grounds within the city. It was not possible to give an affirmative answer to either request

The officers having charge of his execution, were very humanely disposed, and would have willingly done any thing consistent with their duty to alleviate his sufferings; but such was the state of public feeling, that it was not deemed entirely sate to grant him a carriage. Indeed they thought, and the public sentiment accorded with their opinion, that no reason existed for any deviations from the usual course pre scribed by custom on such occasions.

The refusal of these requests it is thought affected lim. He wrote a note immediately to the Rev Dr. Hurley to visit him Whether the billet was written with morethan common pathos. or whether his feelings were overcome by the contemplation of the fate of the young man we know not, but on reading it, the lears gushed from his eyes, and he was hardly able to say "I will

On Priday the prisoner resumed his composure, was better in health, and ato a hearty dinner. At times file situation, and it is very natural, seemed to rush on his mind with-an irresistible force; at others he was more calm.

We understand that the prisoner re peatedly expressed his deep regret at the death of capt, Carson. The mouning of his execution, he sent for a person of whom he had in his passion spoken harshly. The person visited him. Smith with tears confessed his fault-spoke with feeling on his situation and approaching fate, and acknow-ledged its fistice.

On Saturday morning we are ;told that the prisoner sent for the Leepers of the prison, and thanked their individually, presenting them his hands the time appointed for departure from the prison, he was dressed in blue, hav-ing on at is believed, the very surrout which he wore when the deed was done The rope was placed on his neck in the prison. Some wine was given him be fore the doors of the prison yard open ed he then rode out, having Dr. Hur-ley by his side engaged to prayer; a person kindly sat in the eart and held on univelle over them, as the sun was powerful; the prisoners, back was to wards the horse but the coffin was hel

It is impossible to give an idea of miles that ciewded to see the

the throng of thousands and len thousands who floriged a the place of execution. To what principle, in our stature is it to be referred? Horseman design in security of the se in scents of wo? Is there pleasure ex-tracted from the pain disseling a sellow mortal importances of the present article. A number of applications had been made to governor Snyder for a pardon It is well known that the governor has repeatedly expressed his opinion that the punishment of death should be butaggua arvi nofinique ald'Ir Lodelloda to him, with the hope of its aiding to obtain his release. The governor replied with great correctness, "The pubject of recommended to the legislature repeatedly; as often they decided against it; such therefore must be considered as the settled opinion of Penni sylvania. My duty is to execute the laws of the commonwealth; and not my individual opinions."

The prisoner arrived at the gallow about Ho'clock. For some time he continued in power with Dr Hurley. He then asked if there was no reprieve, circumstance to which he had probably looked with strong expectations.

The wretch condemned with life to part, Still, still, on hope relies, And every pang that rends his heart, Bids expectation rise " The answer was that there was For a time the awful certainty seemed to overwhelm him; but he soon recovered, and told the sheriff-not to It was a moment inconceivably dreadful. Surely the way of the trans gressor is hard. A young man, not yet having accomplished his four and twentieth year, just about to be precipitated by a violent and ignominiout death into the dark abyss of eternity! Every soul seemed to recoil with horror, while tire sentiment seemed general that he justly suffered, vet mercy snatched the sceptre from justice, and a low murmur of pity ran from one extreme of the living field to the other. The place too. It was a burying ground! and there were many graves already opened.—
The heart must be unfeeling that did not tremble, and the prayer for the prisoner's soul, mingled with, "Father lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil," ascended from thousands of hearts to the throne of Mercy. He bid those around him facwell, and the feelings of Dr. Hurley were so overcome, that in parting he fainted and fell into the arms of a friend

At 19 minutes past 11, he fell! He was taken down at 10 minutes before 12. His body was interred in a burying place over Schuylkill,

The orderthat was preserved throughout so wast an assemblage; the deceney and propriety with which the whole ceremony was conducted, reflects the highest honour upon the sheriff, his officers, and upon the police of the city, as well as upon the people who attended to witness the scene.

True American.

From the Feleral Republican. DUANE AND HIS FRIENDS.

We would ask our democratic opponents, seriously, what kind of evidence they would deem sufficient to expose the folly, the blunders and incapacity of our administration? If they are resolved to believe in the sanctity of our cabinet, in defiance of all evidence, it would be candid to state their determination in full and express terms : it would be far better to adopt the maxim of the English constitution at once, and to hold that Messrs. Madison & Munrue can do no terong. Let them meet the question fairly and honestly, and say that the more blunders there mem-bers of our cabinet commit the nors fully their dirty artifices are public scorn, detestation and ablor rence; the better qualified they are to become condidates for the office of our chief magistrate. We have produced federal evidence in abundance to prove the depravity of the cabinet. What is the answer given to such testimony! The answer is ready-traitors, torics, and blue-lights! Very well, gentlemen. let this evidence be disposed of in this way if you please-let this poor degrading, forlorn beggarly apology answer for Air. Madison's integrity and honour.

Bat here comes the president's friend Durne, to swear to the same facts! He testifics to the depravity; of our admit-nistration, it full as the federalists can What carver is to be given to this friend of Mr. Madison? oh, the answer is ready—four words will do the business-traitors, tories, and bine lights again! Well then confirmen, you will certainly, allow us thus much, that a man most be a degraded being of whom, neither his friends, nor his memies can say any good But the condition of poor Messes. Madison & Monroe is still more deplorable; for their enemics say bitter things about them, & their friends inficitely worse. What renders this dilemma far more strange and wooderful is that the most inti-Monroe, those who have most unsparshared their confidence, hold them beyond measure in the most con-tempt and adherrence. Something may be said in entequation of those friends of the entitlet who view their chaloct in a distance—they may believe emparious and statesmen from in a black following of their real, characters—such men may wan honeatly err, and the gravest score and contempt by their boson friends. Bles, whom they have loaded with honours, if any allis from such hands can be called borours. speak of their characters with more emphasis of disdain, than even their open and declared enemies have done. Both the friends, and the enemies of the cabinet, testify to the same facte, and look upon thein with the same ut-ter and total abhorrence. We repeat the observation, that this is a most sing gular and disgreceful predicament for great men, and exalted patriots. It is singular, indeed, that so much political worth and virtue as the cabinet Boast of possessing, should liave so many bosom friends, who have never been able to discover one single solitary vestige south qualities.
"Miserable comforters are ye," exclaimed Job; and our administration rave abundant cause to repeat the same elaculation. But the case is, if possible still stronger against our patriots at Washington. With all the patronage which these exalted characters possess they have nothing but calumny, abuse, misrepresentation and falsehood to hay in their defence, whether assailed by their triends, or their enemies. They are obliged to discard their old friends, because they do not think the vindica tion of their characters safe in mich hands. Our fellow-citizens of Maryland will say at the next election, whe ther they will consent to support a party, who repose their confidence in a cabinet despised by their own bosom friend-who are held in abhorrence, by men who have been loaded by their favours. These are serious and important questions, and if our fellow cits zens are betraved-if they will give their suffrages to such a party, let them not complain-let them rather thank themselves, if they find that such con fidence, so give i, is abused afterwards

From the Frederick Town Herold. August 10. PAY YOUR TAXES!

We would advise all persons who have not yet paid the U. States tax to pay it immediately Should they defer payment until after the first of October next, by a new regulation of Mr. Ma-dison's Secretary of the Treasury, they will be compelled to pay in specie. important document, signed by Mr. Dallas himself, we give in a preceding column-By which, it will be seen, the evil day is likely to arrive much earlier than was generally anucipated, and while government is paying its creditors in depreciated paper and the banks are not compelled to redeem their notes with specie, the farmers will be obliged to pay their taxes in gold and silver .-I'rue, it is Mr. Dallas's letter does not at first view appear to make such a requisition, as he only demands sums of one dollar and under, for internal ax es, to be paid in specie. This we suppose could have been generally compli d with, but he takes care to direct the collectors not to receive, the notes of ' any bank, which does not pay upon demand its notes of five dollars and under, in the legal currency of the United States"-As there is no bank in Maryland that does so, the consequence is, that the whole amount, be it one dollar or one hundred, must be paid in hard money, for the other provisions of Mr. Dallas's plan afford no relief to the farmer-Treasury notes, in which payment may also be made; we have none incirculation, nor are they to be had. unless at an advance of 9 or 10 per cent; and as to paying in notes of the United States bank it is all findge; as the bank will not go into operation for six months to come. But read the let ter, and there see a few more of the be nefits and blessings, consequent on our late war.
