For Sale, By the subscriber, at his farm near Annapolis, Horses, Cattle and Swine among the Cattle there are several Work Oxen well broke to the yoke and ten or twelve Milch Cows. J. T. Chase, Oct. 31.

NOTICE.

By virtue of a decree of the court of chancery, I will sell at public auction, at Wm. Brewer's Tavern, in the city of Annapolis, at 12 o'clock, Monday, the 18th day of November next, the dwelling plantation of Jesse Williams, senior, late of Anne Arundel county, deceased, called Rock Hill, and Franklin's Embankment containing one hundred and fifteen acres of land, lying within five miles of Annapolis, and two of Queen Ann, adjoining the estates of Dr. Claggett and Mr. James Iglehart, and considered one of the most productive and valuable farms of its size in the country. The improvements are tolerable dwelling houses, a good tobacco house, some good meadow, a very good orchard, and has an excellent supply of timber and wood. Further description is thought unnecessary, as it is presumed that persons inclined to purchase will view the premises, and make themselves acquainted with its value.

The terms of sale are, that the purchaser shall give bond, with approved security, for paying the purchase money, with interest, within twelve months from the day of sale.

Nicholas Brewer, Trustee. Oct 31.

NOTICE.

The subscriber intends to petition the Legislature of Maryland at the next session for the benefit of the insolvent act passed at November Session eighteen hundred and five, and the several supplements thereto. John Deale, Oct 31.

Notice is hereby given,

That application will be made to the Legislature of Maryland, at its next session, for an act to authorize the sale of the reversionary interest of Ann Matilda Hebb, to certain lands lying in St. Mary's county. Wm. Webb, Oct 31.

NOTICE.

I forewarn all persons from hunting with dog or gun on the farm where I reside, or on the one adjoining it, or in any other manner trespassing, as I am determined to enforce the law against all such offenders. John H. Brown, Oct 31.

NOTICE.

The subscriber hereby forewarns all persons trespassing upon his farm with dog or gun, or in any other way, as he is determined to prosecute with the utmost rigour of the law all who hereafter thus offend. John Marriott, Oct 31.

Notice is hereby given,

That the subscriber intends to apply to the next county court of Anne Arundel county, for a commission to mark and bound part of a tract or parcel of land, lying in said county, called "Covell's Folly," agreeable to the act of assembly in such cases made and provided. Thomas Platts, Oct 31.

Chancery Sale.

By virtue of a decree of the court of Chancery, the subscriber will expose to public sale, on Friday the 22d day of November next, if fair, if not the next fair day thereafter, at Hunter's Tavern in the city of Annapolis. A valuable tract or parcel of land formerly owned by Mr. Seth Evesque, called "Lydia's Field," containing 510 acres more or less, situated on the north side of South River, in A. A. County, now in the possession of Mr. Richard W. Watts. It is deemed unnecessary to give a further description of the above property, as it is presumed that those who wish to purchase will view the same previous to the sale. Sale to commence at 12 o'clock.

Terms of Sale—Cash to be paid on the day of sale, or on the ratification thereof by the Chancellor. On the ratification of the sale and on payment of the whole purchase money, the subscriber is authorized to execute a deed. Louis Gassaway, Trustee, Oct 31.

Duane's Reasons for opposing Caucus Nominations.

- 1. The Caucus is "a pre-established body," which the convention of 1787 wished to guard against, by the provisions in the constitution. 2. The caucus is exclusively composed of members of congress, whom the convention prohibited by the constitution from being electors. 3. The nomination of the caucus is made in one place, which the convention wished to guard against—and that place is in the very midst of the government influence, and of foreign ministers. 4. The nomination of the caucus has invariably prevailed, and therefore amounts to an actual election. 5. The electors in the several states do not deliberate, scrutinize, or vote independently as the convention and the constitution contemplated—they merely register the decision of the caucus of members of congress. 6. The decision in caucus has been made invariably by a majority of the whole number of members of congress, without debate, without deliberation, without responsibility, and simply by secret silent voting. 7. The caucuses have held private correspondence with the candidates to be nominated. And hence, fellow-citizens, it clearly appears— 1. That the constitution is openly violated by members of congress. 2. That the right of the people to elect their chief magistrate is taken from them. 3. That this outrage is committed at the seat of government with the connivance of the candidates nominated. 4. That the election of electors is as ridiculous a ceremony as the voting of a Polish diet under Russian bayonets. 5. That the only excuses for such outrages upon the rights of the people are expediency and precedent, which have, in other states, been the pretences for every species of private wrong or public iniquity.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser, Oct. 19.

The fifty-second number of the Edinburgh Review contains a very entertaining article on the narrative of Robert Adams, an American sailor, who was detained as a slave for several years in the interior of Africa. He sailed from America in June, 1810, in the ship Charles, and proceeding on a trading voyage to the coast of Africa, was shipwrecked near Cape Blanco, 400 miles to the northward of Senegal. The whole crew were there made prisoners by a tribe of Moors. A short time afterwards, Adams, with a Portuguese, named Stevens, while on a slaving expedition was captured, with his masters, by a large party of negroes, and sent as prisoners to Tombuctoo, to be sold. He remained at this place six months; and the most important part of his narrative relates to this celebrated city. The size, population, wealth and civilization of this city have been, according to Adams's account, extravagantly exaggerated. It is large in extent, but the houses are much scattered. The King and Queen, Woola and Fatima, are old, with grey hair, and the latter excessively fat, and dressed in blue nankeen. The palace is of mud, and excessively mean.—The largest vessels are canoes ten feet long.—The soil is easily cultivated, and only with a hoe. The principal food is guinea corn, ground between two stones boiled, and eaten with goat's milk. No knives, spoons, or other utensils are used at their meals. They have no outward appearances of religion; no house of worship; no priests. They have no shops; the goods imported remain in the king's palace until sold. Adams thinks that no white man had ever been at Tombuctoo before him, from the information he received, and from the curiosity that his colour excited.

After about six months they were ransomed by a party of Moors, and after a distressing journey over the desert, and a variety of interesting adventures, arrived at Wadinson, where Adams was detained as a slave for a long time, and shockingly maltreated. At length he was ransomed by Mr. Dupuis, the British Vice Consul at Mogadore. From Mogadore he proceeded to Fez, and thence, under the care of the American Consul, to Cadiz, where he arrived May 17, 1814. After remaining more than a year at Cadiz, he proceeded to Gibraltar, in pursuit of a passage to his native country, but being disappointed he worked his passage to London. He remained there a short time in extreme poverty and misery.

Being accidentally discovered by some gentlemen, who had heard something of his adventures, he was carried to the office of the African committee. He afterwards underwent various examinations, although very reluctant to delay his embarkation for America, by a number of gentlemen, from the result of which examination the narrative is compiled. A variety of circumstances are related, as tests of the credibility of Adams, all of which are so decidedly conclusive in his favor, that there is very little reason to doubt his veracity or the general accuracy of his narrative.

The following is an extract from the part of the narrative which describes the journey of 29 days across the Desert, from Tudenog to Yied Duleim, during which they did not meet with a human being, or see a tree or shrub, or even a blade of grass. They suffered greatly for food and water, the season, being uncommonly dry, and the usual watering places failing.

"The Moors who had been in confinement at Tombuctoo, being every day weaker, three of them in the four following days lay down, unable to proceed. They were then placed upon the camels; but continual exposure to the excessive heat of the sun, and the uneasy motion of the camels, soon rendered them unable to support themselves, and towards the end of the second day they made another attempt to pursue their journey on foot but could not.

The next morning at day break they were found dead on the sand, in the place where they had lain down at night, and were left behind without being buried.—The next day another of them lay down, and like his unfortunate companions, was left to perish.—But on the following day, one of the Moors determined to remain behind, in the hope that he who had dropped the day before, might still come up, and be able to follow the party. Some provisions were left for him. At this time it was expected, what proved to be the fact, that they were within a day's march of their town; but neither of the men ever afterwards made his appearance; and Adams has no doubt that they perished."

DISTRESSING FIRE.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in New-Orleans, to his friend in this city, dated September 29. "P. S.—It is with sincere regret I have to inform you, that since writing the foregoing, we have had a most alarming and distressing FIRE, which commenced in the new Assembly Room and extended immediately to the New Theatre; which, together with three entire and principal squares, fronting on Royal street, have been entirely consumed—and had not the wind fortunately lulled, at least one half of our city would have shared the same fate." Fed. Gaz.

to cut away all her masts; some of the small craft, among which was a fine coppered schr. belonging to Mr. King of Guadaloupe, went ashore & was dashed to atoms. The wreck of small houses were floating down the streets at Basseterre, the whole of Sunday night, and the following Monday, when the gale abated. Some considerable loss has been sustained by those who held perishable articles in those stores, which were mostly exposed."

CAUCUS NOMINATIONS.

A Convention has been lately held at Carlisle, (Pennsylvania) for the purpose of forming a new electoral ticket for the President and Vice-Presidents of the U. S. The members have solemnly protested against caucus nominations, and that they will maintain their opposition to this system "as long as Heaven shall prolong their existence, and impose it upon their children as one of the most sacred duties to be performed when they shall be no more; that they will pursue the example of their fathers, and will resist those encroachments, which, if continued, must deprive themselves and their posterity of that liberty, with out which, existence is scarcely desirable."

The convention then propose a new electoral ticket, at the head of which, appears the venerable name of Charles Thompson. [Telegraph.]

William H. Crawford, Secretary of War, is appointed by the President of the U. S. to be Secretary of the Treasury, in the place of Mr. Dallas, resigned. We have not heard who is to succeed Mr. Crawford in the War Department. [National Advertiser.]
