Further Particulars of the late fire at New-Orleans.

From a New-Orleans paper of September 30.

On Saturday at noon the inhabitants of New-Orleans were startled by the fire-bell. With their usual alacrity they repaired to the scene—but such was the suddenness and fury of the conflagration that before the alarm could be spread through town, the whole neighbourhood where the calamity originated, was enveloped in flames. We are unwilling to allude to the cause of this disaster; but it is the imperious and indispensable duty of the corporation to prevent the recurrence of an accident from the same cause, and they have it in their power to do so.

The fire first caught in the new building of Mr. John Davis, adjoining the Orleans Theatre in Orleans street—the wind was very high at the time, and the houses in the neighbourhood being dry in consequence of a long drought, the destruction spread with unparalleled rapidity. The sides of the squares, viz. Orleans, from Royal to Bourbon streets—Bourbon from Orleans to St. Ann street, are totally destroyed—while the square above, viz. the upper side of Orleans street from Royal to Bourbon, Bourbon from Orleans to St. Peter street, and nearly the whole of the lower and upper side of St. Peter street, between Royal and Bourbon streets, are likewise destroyed. Had it not been for the prompt and powerful succour afforded by Major Many, with a detachment of U. S. soldiers, the flames would have spread to the square including the principal, the prison and the cathedral, the consequences of which in all probability would have been that one half the city would at this moment be a heap of desolation.

CONSPIRACY.

On Tuesday the Grand Jury of the city of Philadelphia, found a TRUE BILL for Conspiracy against Ann Carson, alias Ann Smyth—Jane Baker, Elisha Bowen, alias Davis, alias Owen D. Jones, and John Ryde, alias Henry Willis, alias Nathaniel B. Bard.

Extraordinary property of the Onion.

The magnetic power of a Compass needle will be entirely destroyed or changed by being touched with the rind of an Onion. This fact may seem trifling; but we regard it as one of the first importance; and investigated, may lead to consequences equal to the discovery of the magnet itself. [Petersburg Intell.]

brand in company, the made directly for the squadron, such a way as to enable the Jackson to make her escape. One of the owners of the Gen. Jackson and cargo, an eminent lawyer of this city, was on board of this schooner, and went in her, in capacity of supercargo, &c. &c. he however, thought proper to shift his quarters and get on board the "Firebrand." He has arrived here, but his schooner to run the gauntlet—will no doubt, be taken, and every man on board be hung. This disappointment and unexpected loss has enraged all the owners of the General Jackson to madness; they must have war with Spain, whether or not; having called a meeting and adopted resolutions, which you will of course see. The principal movers of this meeting were Mr. Dugan and Mr. Grimes; the former was for the sch. Gen. Jackson what merchants call ship's husband, and the latter went out as supercargo, but we have already stated, took care to go aboard the Firebrand in due time to save his neck. The above facts, for may depend, are substantially correct.

Most of the ships are ordinary and probably will always remain so, as Spain is not in a condition to fit them out, let the necessity be ever so great.

Julian Skeleton Found.

Marietta, (Penn.) Oct. 14.

On the 14th of this month, Mr. Longenecker, distiller, residing about three miles above this borough on the river Susquehanna, was digging clay, within a few rods of his house, on the side of a private road, for the purpose of getting his stiles, when, after he had dug to the depth of between two or three feet, he struck upon the skull of a human skeleton which was discovered, on the large bones being taken up, to be about 6 feet 8 or 9 inches long, and the bones much larger than those of the human species of the present day. Mr. Longenecker, informs us that he took one of the bones of the larger finger of the right hand, upon which was two rings (but on being touched they fell to dust) and placed it of the finger of his own hand, when he found the bone to be nearly a half an inch longer. The face was up, with the arms extended from the body, the right hand considerably the deepest in the earth—On the right side was found a musket barrel upwards of four feet long, so much bent as to break on being taken up, also the lock, and some brass mounting, a large tomahawk, a scalping knife, and a large jack knife, with a transparent handle, under laid with gold leaf, a brass tobacco box, containing two jews-harps, of a novel form, and a silver button. Two smoke pipes were also found, with the letters R. T. on each of them, twice lead bullets, a glass bead the size of a musket ball, with a hole through it, a stone dart, a small octagonal looking glass, four flints, one in the gun lock, two very small white beads, and several other trifling articles not recollected. The bones were re-buried by Mr. Longenecker in the same place from whence they had been taken—the other articles, which we have seen, he still has in his possession.
