From the Gazette of the Blbe, dated April 2.

"We hete present our readers with some further details relative to the tumultuous scenes which took place at Stockholm on the 13th of March, of which the public papers gave you only a general sketch. For some time past a party has been seeretly forming against the Prince & hisson, & which has been daily gainng strength. Their plans were at length formed and matured, and were to have been carried into execution on the 13th of March. It was agreed to have a grand masked ball on that day, at which the Prince Royal and his son were to be present, and where an attack was to be made on the life of the two Princes. A short time previous to the commencement of the fete, the Prince Royal received an anonymous letter informing him of the conspiracy, and as it contained the most substantial details, the Prince could not doubt of its reality. He immediately convoked the Council of State, which he kept assembled around him till early the next morning. During the night all was tranquil and the ball continued as if nothing was in agitation or expected, excepting, that none of the Royal Family were present. The next morning the principal officers of the garrison, and the most distinguish ed personages and inhabitants of the town repaired to the Palace of the Prince Royal, and actured him of their fidelity & determination to defend him. Oo the same day Couriers were despatched to all parts of the kingdom, carrying Proclamations from the Prince Royal to the people, in which he assures the nation of his inviolable fidelity to the last hour of his existence; but he requires in exchange an unshaken and unalterable attachment to his person and family.

" At present every thing bears the aspect of the greatest tranquility; but still some degree of uneasiness exists. It is not known whether any persons have been arrested.

Barthquake and remarkable Thenos

The French papers which arrive ed yesterday supply the following particulars in addition to those which we have formerly published under this head : The earthquake which was felt at Barcelona on the 18th ult. at elgven o'clock in the morning, was likewise felt on the same day at Les rida, at Saragossa, and at Madrid. At Saragossa it was experienced some minutes before, and et Madrid some minutes after, the shock at Barcelona; but in the two latter cities much more strongly than in the former. At Saragossa the concussion was so violent as to throw down a painting in the chapel of the Virgin of the Pillar, during the performance of mass; the people were frightened, and fled the church. At Madrid the commotion was still more alarming, and was felt particularly at the royal manufactory of Porcelain at the Retiro, an edifice almost ruined during the war .-There it overthrew a wall that killed two men. A violent shock was likewise felt at the Palace of Justice .- The judges, who were sitt. ing, deserted the hall, which trembled around them. It was believed to come from the west, and it is feared that Lisbon has suffered by this convulsion. News from that town is therefore expected with impatience. The weather at Barcetonas continued clear and serene. and the air had recovered its usual temperature. The journal of Barcelona publishes an article, dated Alcocir, in the province of Guadalaxara, the 28th of February, which details the following circumstances: "We have just witnessed a phenomenon seldom experienced in regions distant from the coast. On the 20th of the month, the weather was rainy from the morning downwards, and the warmth was greater than is usual at the season. At three o'clock in the evening there was some lightning, accompanied with thunder, which soon ceased; but at half-past six o'clock there suddenly arose a violent wind, like those which commonly precede, in summer, violent storms. There fell at the same time hall and rain with thunder and lightning. The heaven was brightened, and there only remained a black cloud, which increased instantly, in an extraordinary manner, discharging from 4 its skirts, about a quarter before seven o'clock, such a flash of lightning, with such a clap of thunder, that the people who were in the streets, or in the country, fell to the earth frightened with the terrible noise, with the glare which struck their sight, and with the sulphurous smell which extended to

Some sed was another ciap of thunder, not so strong as the former, and the cloud opening, discharged an immense globe of fire, which failing on the tower of the convent of Franciscans, overturned the iron cross on its summit, & set on fire the wood work, a portion of which, in a state of combistion, having entered the church, destroyed a part of it; while the rest descending by the walls, kindled the different doors and windows of the convent. broke, tore up, and divided the ceils, overturned and destroyed the furniture which they contained, and excited such terror in the monks, who were in the choir that they fell to the earth, and would perhaps have choaked by the sulphurous vapour which surrounded them, had they not immediately received assistance. This explosion was followed by a heavy fall of hajl, which lasted more than a minute; after which the heavens recovered their screnity.

the most retired recesses of their dwellings.

An event, of which we gave an account from a Pampeluna paper, was more disastrous than we then stated. By letters recently received we learn, that not only some villages have suffered by the earthquake but that the whole town of Ardenillo, in Old Castile, has been buried under the fall of the meighbouring mountain; shat allege inhabitants bave perished and that nothing but the top of the believ in meen above
