

POETS CORNER

THE ISLE OF FLOWERS.

By N. Hillwright. 'Tis reported that there is a small island in Lake Huron, remarkable for its romantic scenery...

In Huron's wave a lovely isle Gens the blue waters vast expanse; There Nature wears her sweetest smile...

In vain the angry billows beat Against its rock encircled shore; The spray but makes its blossoms sweet...

But when the winds and waves are hush'd, And evening's shade is stealing on— When the last beams of day have blush'd...

How gently weep the dews of night, Which bow the slender hare bell's head; And falling noiseless, sweetly light...

Oh! were but man like that fair Isle, In vain would trouble's tempests bloom; Hope's fairest flowers around should smile...

The radiant star of peace would rise, And dew of grace at evening shade, His spirit nurture for the skies.

THE OBSERVER.

Great effects often spring from small causes. I have often remarked by what small and apparently imperceptible degrees youth are confirmed in vicious habits...

It might be easy for those who have influence in society, to ameliorate our habits in this respect. All of us have occasion sometimes to visit taverns—to see friends, to read the news, or transact business...

The subject is worthy of consideration; and I hope this hint will not pass unobserved. It is truly a serious reflection, that in this favoured and fertile land of freedom, the baleful habits of intemperate drinking are prevalent in all ranks of society...

It is a truth that intemperance is the grand parent of almost every crime—the mother of miseries. How often do thoughtless sons bring sorrow & shame on dotting parents. How often does an imprudent father rear in ignorance and vice a numerous family!

better to strike at the root of these evils.

From the Literary Gazette. DOGS OF ST. BERNARD.

A German Almanack, recently published, contains some details concerning the dog named Barry, one of the predecessors of those who lately perished amidst the snow of the Great Saint Bernard. This intelligent animal served the hospital of that mountain for the space of 12 years, during which time he saved the lives of forty individuals...

One day, this interesting animal found a child in a frozen state, between the bridge of Donax and the ice house Balsora; he immediately began to lick him, and having succeeded in restoring animation, by means of his caresses he induced the child to tie himself round his body. In this way he carried the poor little creature, as if in triumph, to the hospital. When age deprived him of his strength, the poor of the convent pensioned him at Henry, by way of reward. He is now dead, and his hide is stuffed and deposited in the museum of that town.

The little phial, in which he carried a reviving liquor for the distressed travellers whom he found among the mountains, is still suspended from his neck.
