PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

ANSWER OF THE PRESIDENT TO THE ADDRESS OF THE CINCINNATI.

To His Excellency Gov. Brooks, President of the Cincinnati of Massachusetts.

The affectionate address of my brothers of the Cincinnati, awakens in my mind the most grateful emotions. No approbation can be more dear to me, than that of those with whom I have had the honour to share the common toils and perils of the war for our Independence. We were embarked in the same sacred cause of Liberty, and we have lived to enjoy the reward of our common labours. Many of our companions in arms fell in the field before our Independence was achieved, and many, less fortunate than ourselves, lived not to witness the perfect fulfilment of their hopes in the prosperity and happiness of our country. You do but justice to yourselves in claiming the confidence of your country, that you can never desert the standard of freedom. You fought to obtain it, in times when men's hearts and principles were severely tried; and your public sacrifices and honourable actions are the best pledges of your sincere and devoted attachment to our excellent constitution. May your children never forget the sacred duties devolved on them, to preserve the inheritance so gallantly acquired by their fathers. May they cultivate the same manly patriotism, the same disinterested friendship, and the same political integrity, which has distinguished you; and that unite in perpetuating that social concord and public virtue on which the future prosperity of our country must so essentially depend. I feel most deeply the truth of the melancholy suggestion, that we shall probably meet no more. While, however, we remain in life, I shall continue to hope for your countenance and support so far as my public conduct may entitle me to your confidence; and in bidding you farewell, I pray a kind Providence long to preserve your valuable lives for the honour and benefit of your country.

JAMES MONROE.

ANSWER OF THE PRESIDENT, To Henry Dearborn, Benjamin Austin, Thomas Melville, William Little, Russell Sturgis, John Brazer, Jacob Knapp and William Ingalls, Esquires.

I have received with great satisfaction the very friendly welcome which you have given me on the part of some of the members of the Legislature of Massachusetts, and of others, citizens of Boston, who had deputed you, to offer me their congratulations on my arrival in this metropolis.

Conscious of having exerted my best faculties with unwearied zeal, to support the rights and advance the prosperity of my fellow-citizens, in the various important trusts with which I have been honoured by my country, the approbation which you have expressed of my conduct, is very gratifying to me.

It has been my undeviating effort, in every situation in which I have been placed, to promote, to the utmost of my abilities, the success of our Republican Government. I have pursued this policy, from a thorough conviction, that the prosperity and happiness of the whole American people, depended on the success of the great experiment which they have been called to make. All impartial persons now bear testimony to the extraordinary blessings with which we have been favoured. Well satisfied, I am, that these blessings are to be imputed to the excellence of our government, and to the wisdom and purity with which it has been administered.

Believing that there is not a section of our union, nor a citizen, who is not interested in the success of our government, I indulge a strong hope, that they will all unite in future, in the measures necessary to secure it. For this very important change, I consider the circumstances of the present epoch peculiarly favourable. The success and unexampled prosperity with which we have hitherto been blessed, must have dispelled the doubts of all who had before honestly entertained any, of the practicability of our system, and from these, a firm and honourable co-operation may fairly be expected. Our union has also acquired, of late, much strength. The proofs which have been afforded, of the great advantages communicated by it, to every part, and of the ruin which would inevitably and promptly overwhelm, even the parts most favoured, if it should be broken, seem to have carried conviction home to the bosoms of the most unbelieving. On the means necessary to secure success, and to advance with increased rapidity, the growth and prosperity of our country, there seems now to be but little, if any difference of opinion.

It is on these grounds that I indulge a strong hope, and even entertain great confidence, that our principal dangers and difficulties have passed, and that the character of our deliberations, and the course of the government itself, will become more harmonious and happy than it has heretofore been.

Satisfied as I am, that the union of the whole community, in support of our Republican Government, by all wise and proper measures, will effectually secure it from danger, that union is an object to which I look with the utmost solicitude. I consider it my duty to promote it, on the principles and for the purposes stated; and highly gratified shall I be, if it can be obtained. In frankly avowing this motive, I owe it to the integrity of my views to state, that as the support of our Republican Government is my sole object, and in which I consider the whole community equally interested, my conduct will be invariably directed to that end. In seeking to accomplish so great an object, I shall be careful to avoid such measures as may by any possibility sacrifice it.

JAMES MONROE.

PORTSMOUTH.

To the President of the United States.

Sir, The presence of the Chief Magistrate, selected for his eminent virtues and public services to preside over and direct the councils of a great nation, must always excite feelings of the highest interest. The inhabitants of the town of Portsmouth, remote from the seat of the general government, can expect few opportunities of witnessing such a gratifying scene. We therefore eagerly embrace this fortunate occasion to present our ardent and sincere congratulations.

Engaged chiefly in the business of commerce and navigation, we know our destinies are, in a peculiar manner, dependent on the measures of that government, to which the protection of those important objects is exclusively confided. These enterprising pursuits, which have always been greatly contributory to the general welfare, are now suffering under a temporary depression. But we have entire confidence that the wisdom and justice of government will extend to them all the protection and support that shall be in its power.

To superintend and conduct the national concerns has always in free governments been the favourite employment of the best and greatest men. By no other means can an individual of distinguished talents so eminently promote the public good. The successful performance of such duties must at all times constitute a sure claim to the gratitude of a generous people. This, sir, is the arduous and honourable service which is entrusted to you by the citizens of the United States.

Sensible how greatly the national prosperity depends on the due administration of the government, we recall to our recollection, with much satisfaction, the numerous pledges of attachment to the public interest, furnished by the history of your past life. It is our earnest and confident hope that your administration, by perfecting our valuable institutions, and by uniting public sentiment, and wisely directing it to proper national objects, may fulfil the present happy anticipations, & thus establish on a firm basis your own & your country's happiness, honour & glory.

J. MASON, In behalf of the inhabitants of Portsmouth.
