but in consequence of the act to Suppress Duelling, (passed at last session,) prescribing an additional oath to the old oath of qualification, which additional oath was deemed unconstitutional, the members precommunicated by letter to one of the delegates, and after the members convened, they determined to dispense with the additional oath, and qualify in the manner hereto-We have been politely favoured with a copy of Mr. Martin's letter, which we flere Insert. before mentioned.

I certainly would not wish to throw any obstacles in the way of any legislative provisions for the suppression or prevention of duetling; but so far as the law or last session requires, that the member chosen as a representative shall be obliged to take the oath prescribed by that act, I think there can be no doubt but that the same is unconstitutional. The constitution has declared what are the qualifications which shall render a person eligible, and when duly elected, what ouths are to be taken by the member chosen, before he takes his seat. The additional oath required by the aforesaid law, has not the apology of having any relation to the peculiar duties which he owes to his country in his legislative character; nor to regulate his conduct while he sustains that character. If such a law can constitutionally be-past, the legislature may, with as much propriety, enumerate every breach of the decalogue through all the subdivisions of each of the com mandments and compel each member, beiore he can serve his constituents, who have made him their choice, to bind himself by the solemn sarction of an oath, to live thereafter a life of sinless purity. Nor can I think it, even in a moral or religious point of view, correct, that such oaths should be taken; for although it is certainly a sacred duty to orm the strongest resolutions against the violation of any duty, which we owe to our God, or our fellow-creature, and to solicit di vine assistance to give us strength to keep such resolutions, yet I can scarcely believe, the most pious divine would recommend, to those un der his charge, to lay such a snare for their souls, as to bind themselves, with an oath, to keep them: And I can easily conceive that a man, who would conscientiously desire to p rform every duty, might shriuk, almost with horror, from placing himself in such a predicament, that if through the weakness of human nature he should violate his duty, he must thereby incur not only the guilt peculiar to the specifit offence, but also stain his soul, in addition, with the guilt of perjury. At the more conscientious the person, the greater in all probability would be the reluctance. Whether the legislature by more ly passing a law, could constitutionally disable a man from being chosen a delegate for having been guilty of sending a challenge, I think very doubtful-But in this case they have gone much further, they have declared a man to be ineligible, not for committing a crime, but because he may decline to bind himself under the sanction of an oath, that he never will commit it; or what amounts to the same as to declare him ineligible; for it prohibits him from serving, if elected.

I remain, dear sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant. LUTHER MARTIN. Benjamin W. Lecompte, esq.

IMPORTANT!

Milledgeville, Geo. Nov. 18. The executive of this state received on Saturday, by express, the following important information: Extract of a letter from Gen. Gaines, dated Head Quarters, Fort Gaines, 9th Nov. 1817. SIR-I had the honour to receive at Fort Montgomery on the eve o my movements hither, your Excel lency's communication of the 17th September. My disposable force,

A had entertained a hope that the Seminale Indians, apprized of this movement, would yield to my decessity of marching to the Frontier, the auxilliary force which you were sent did not qualify, but adjourned pleased to put in readiness for the until the next day, that farther purposes. This hope has not been time might be had to consider the freilized. On the contrary, it apsubject. On Tuesday the opinions pears from the best information I can of Luther Martin, Esquire, was obtain, that the Seminoles have made arrangements to collect their force, amounting to upwards of two thousand warriors, and attack us as soon as we cross Flint river. Although I put little faith in their threats, and believe their numbers to be overrated-yet, under all the circumstances of the case, I feel it to be my duty to request of your Excellency, the regiment of Infantry and squadron of Cavatry, de signated for this service; and that they may be ordered to assemble as Fort Hawkins on the 25th instant, or as soon after that day as may be practicable-where the infantry will be armed and equipped, & the whole mustered and inspected, by Major Nix of the army of the U. States. I apprehend it will not be practicable to arm the Cavalry, but in part: It is therefore very desirable that this part of the force should bring with them their own arms and equipments -otherwise I shall be under the ne cessity of putting muskets into the hands of such as I may be unable otherwise to arm."

Copy of a letter from Maj. Twiggs to Gen Gaines, dated Fort Scott, 1st Nov. SIR-Since my last communication, nothing of any importance has occurred in this quarter. I have a character in confinement, who was present at the meeting at the Mikasuka town the last of September. The determination of the Indians is, to give up no murderers or others. to the whites, & as soon as we cross counted the number present at the meeting-there wer, 2700 warriors.

In compliance with the above reby the Governor for the draften militia to rendezvous at the place appointed by the first of next month.

Extract from a merchant at Natchez dated Oct. 20, 1817; to his friend in Newark, N. . . . "The fever continues alarming in this place; and the inhabitants at present do not exceed three hundred; the principal part of the houses are shut, the inhabitants fled to the country. The bank has discontinued business and shut; there are various opinions respecting the origin of the fevers: some presume that it was brought from New-Orleans by the steam boat; others that it was not. It will be a great detriment to business in this place, and a considerable length of time before it will resume its former channel."

ALEXANDRIA, Nov. 19.

Sometime in June last, a Patriot privateer, captured a Spanish merchant ship, and ordered her to a port in the United States. It appeared that the prize crew consisted of four he 4th of July she arrived off Bermuda, where the 4 Americans were assassinated by the Spaniards while asleep in the cabin, and thrown overboard. They then took the ship into Guadaloupe, where the French took possession of her, the Spaniards reported themselves Royalists, and said that they were concealed below when the ship was captured, and took that opportunity to sally out and recapture the ship-tne ship's roll being found and examin-ed, only one could answer to it. The French government had no doubt but the four Spaniards were a part of the privateer's crew, & that they had murdered the four Americans, expecting to share the prize among themselves—They were sent to France for trial. The names of the persons in the books and charts found on board, were all English, also some letters, one in particular, from a young woman in Alexandria, to one of the persons on board. The informer used every exertion to get the papers, but they being in the Judges office, could not be obtained. The following is extracted from an Epitomy: The property of Jacob Barney, resident in Ann-street, F. Point, Baltimore, and bought of S. C. Leakin, Fella-street, F. Point, Baltimore.

Accounts from Saint-Augustine, state that the Spaniards have assembled 1: or 1500 regular to ps and a considerable body of militia for consisting of the 4th and 7th In- the desence of that place.

From the Gleanet. EXECUTION. On Saturday last, the 15th inst.

was executed at Bethany, Wayne County, Penn. pursuant to his senteuce Cornelius Jottes, aged about 22 years, for the murder of his stepfather, which he effected by giving arsenic, which crime, together with several others of less magnitude he confessed previous to execution. After he received his sentence and saw that Death was inevitable, he betook himself to prayer and reading the Scriptures, a practice which he had hitherto, wholly neglected, having never read a chapter in the Bible in his life; at first he felt great discouragement under a sense of the enormity of his crime, and wickedness of h s past life, and sometimes feared that God would not shew mercy to so great a sinner, but being greatly encouraged and strengthened by those who visited him on this occasion, he continued seeking, until at length, while the Sheriff was reading to him his death warrant, about two weeks previous to his execution, he professed to obtain pardon tor all his offences, and felt reconciled to his approaching dissolution. From this time to his latest moments, there was a visible change in his deportment. - The first that was heard in the morning was Cornelius praying and singing praises to God-he was indeed an example of patience and resignation: He was not even heard to express a wish that he might live; the morning of his execution he appeared to enjoy much of the Divine presence. By one he was asked if he was afraid to die, now the day had arrived; he replied, "no, I love death." By another, "is your confidence still strong in the Lord?" He answered yes, I love him and want to be with him."-He was frequently heard to say while in the dungeon & on his way to the gallows: " I'nis is the best and happiest day I ever saw." Nothing appeared to disturb Fint river to attack us. The chiefs | him in the least -bringing in his coffin-putting the halter round his nack-coming in sight of the gallows-all appeared to him as matquisition, orders have been issued | ters of minor importance, and caused not the least apparent perturbation. On the scaffold he maintain ed the same calmness and recollection, that he had hitherto manifested; here in company with others he sung a hymn of his own choice, with a full steady voice: In fact he literally smiled and appeared pleased in death, and met the fatal moment with the firmness of a martyr.
