

and that the man must have fish blood and cold affections, crosses the Allegheny ridge out being roused to activity.— roads, though none can pass with indifference, are peculiar-arming to the invalid or nervous stitution; being in some places fit as to banish all fear of frac-limbs in case of accident, and thers delightfully varied with rock, and slope, and forest brown; the traveller mounts and de-sends successively, until he attains highest elevation. As he pass-ver the pile of mountains which pose the great ridge, he finds self sometimes on the brink of precipice, sometimes in the depth abyss; he sees around him the stupendous works of nature, wildest and most savage features, combined with her more soft and er traits. But nature is not al-seen in her pristine charms ere, for even here the unwearied d of art has traced her lines, the foot of hardy enterprise pierced these regions, and in-try pitched her tents in the so-side. The nimble wary hunter, iding from tide of society and ighbourhood, is found in those ces which are least accessible to footstep of man. The social bandman, more true to nature, sets his cottage in the fertile vale, where his labours yield him an ndant harvest, and where he s society accumulating around e. The victims of penury, opression and misfortune, here find ure retreats, and the weary emiant, sees no want to cross his rains, and no exertion to sweep his honest earnings.

Buried among these mountains, one of those delight retreats which the invalid lies in search health, and where beauty, wealth and fashion display their fascinats. Situated in a pleasant valley, ad surrounded by a healthful coun-y, and a romantic scenery, the brings at Bedford present many al-tments; and when we learn that his spot has been given to the pub-c by the munificence of an individ-al, and prepared for their recep-ion, by the spirited exertions of a few ctive citizens, the generous mind o far from discovering that any ing is wanting, is apt to wonder at so much is offered. We find ot here, it is true, the luxuries that lease a pampered palate, the dissipated scenes which drown reflec-on, or the amusements which in-oxicate the fancy; but we in-rove's not less inviting than those of Arcadia, and fountains as pure ose of Parnassus. Among the inhabi-ants we find ease, simplicity, and social feeling, and among the visitants, taste and elegance. We meet ere the critical Philadelphian, the ospitable Marylander and the positive Virginian; and the variety is requently increased by the addition of a stray Yankee or foreigner. In short, enjoyment may here be found in abundance, by those who possess taste without fastidiousness, and who are willing as well to be pleased themselves, as to contribute to the amusement of others; and there is therefore no apology necessary for calling the attention of such to a spot, to which I came a stranger, where I remained a happy guest, and whence I departed a grateful friend.

EXECUTION OF KESLER.
The Catskill Recorder, after making the enquiry, whether Kesler was executed or not," adds as follows: "We have been informed on the most respectable authority, that Kesler, who was recently suspended from the scaffold in Schoharie county, was restored to life and has made his escape. If we have been misinformed, some person acquainted with the facts, is requested to correct us."

PENSACOLA.
The Milledgeville Reflector of the 16th inst. gives the following particulars of the capture of that post, by the army of Gen. Jackson.

PENSACOLA TAKEN.
We received on Sunday last, by a private conveyance, the following important intelligence from our very attentive correspondent in the Alabama territory, who assures us that he had seen letters from persons who participated in the engagement, corroborating the subsequent account extracted from an Extra dated June 2, issued from the office of the Halcyon, at St. Stephens.

"By a gentleman on whose word the greatest confidence can be placed, who left Pensacola a few days since, we learn, that Gen. Jackson after having obtained possession of the town of Pensacola, summoned the fort at the Barancas (at which pace the governor, the troops, together with some of the citizens, had taken refuge,) to surrender, and the fusal, commenced intrenching with a view of attempting its reduction by regular approaches, and at the same time the firing began on both sides, with but little effect. After continuing these operations for three days, with the loss of two on the part of the American forces, at thirteen Spaniards, the governor surrendered, on conditions that the Spanish troops, and all the citizens who might wish it, together with the venerable Seminole chief, who was in the fort, should be transported to Havana at the expense of the American government. It is said that at the time of surrendering our forces had proceeded within three hundred yards of the fort; that there would have been much longer resistance, on the part of the Spaniards, had not a mutiny taken place amongst them. The flag of the U States is now waving over the walls of the Barancas and the town of Pensacola."

LATEST FROM ENGLAND.

New-York, June 24.
By the arrival at this port, of the ship Radius, Capt. Deane, from London, and at Philadelphia, of the ship Dido, Capt. Maxwell, from Liverpool, the editors of the Commercial Advertiser, are furnished with a very late European Intellig-

On the 13th of May, the Message was read in both Houses of Parliament.
His Royal Highness the Prince Regent, acting in the name and behalf of his Majesty, think right to inform the House of Lords that he has given his consent to the Marriage of his Royal Highness Duke of Kent with the Princess Maria Louisa Victoire, widow of the late Duke of L. iden, and of the reigning Duke of Sa-Cobourg Saxe-Coburg. As this would be satisfactory, his Royal Highness expressed, that he had reason to doubt the House of Lords would enable his Majesty to make suitable provision for the Duke Kent on the said marriage."

In the House of Commons on the 15th of May, Mr. Grant, after some observations on the severe treatment which had been manifested towards Count Las Casas, moved that an address be presented to the Prince Regent, praying that he would lay before the House copies of all correspondence with the principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, relative to the transportation of the Count to Great Britain, and thence to the continent of Europe. This motion, after a considerable debate, was negatived.

From a London paper.
AFFAIR OF FUALDES.
Sitting of May 2.
Young Fualdes addressed the Court in an energetic and affectionate manner, expressing his gratitude for their efforts to bring to justice, the assassins of his unhappy father.
The accused were asked by the President, if they had any thing to offer in their defence, the only reply was, a vehement recrimination between Anne Benoit and the woman Bancal.

Sitting of the 5d May.
The examinations and defence of the accused having been concluded in the last sitting, the President this day entered upon the recapitulation of all the proceedings relative to this horrid affair. After commencing at much length upon the evidence against the prisoners, he examined in the most impartial manner the defence of each of the accused, and then referred the questions separately for the decision of the jury. Whether the accused Catherine Brugiere, alias Bancal, widow, B. stie-Grammont, Joseph Jausion, Jean-Baptiste Colard, Francis Bach, Joseph Missonnier, and Anne Benoit, were guilty of the as-sination of M. Fualdes, and with premeditation. With the exception of the woman Bancal, the question was also submitted, whether they were guilty of having thrown the body of M. Fualdes into the river Aveyron. A third question was put with respect to Bastide and Jausion, whether they had fraudulently possessed themselves of papers and books relative to the pecuniary affairs of M. Fualdes. The jury were required to decide whether Madame Manson was an accomplice, in the same manner as the other questions, relative to the other accused. Some discussion arose between the Procureur General and the Counsel for Anne Benoit as to the tenor of the questions submitted for the decision of the jury; they were however declared to be conformably to law.

At two o'clock the jury retired to deliberate. An express order was given by the President, rigorously to prevent all communication with them.
The accused were not reconduc-ed to St. Cecilia, to wait until their judges should determine their fate.
They were taken to a room adjoining the Assize-court; a strong guard was placed over them. The deliberations of the jury lasted four hours and a half. During this time the numerous spectators which filled the court, did not quit their places. At seven o'clock the jury returned; a profound silence reigned in the auditory, each waited with anxiety a verdict which would acquit or condemn. The foreman of the jury, with his hand upon his heart, and with evident emotion, read the answers to the questions which had been submitted to them.
They were all agreed upon unanimously. The woman Bancal, Bas-side, Jausion, Colard, and Bach were found guilty of being accomplices in the murder with premeditation.

Anne Benoit guilty as an accomplice without premeditation. Bastide, Jausion, Bach and Colard, guilty of throwing the body into the river, the former guilty of the burglarious robbery. Missonnier not guilty of being concerned in the murder, but an accomplice in the throwing of the body into the river. Madame Manson was unanimously declared not guilty. After pronouncing the verdict to the court, the foreman of the jury signed it; and the President ordered the accused to be brot before them. Jausion was so weak that the gentlemen were obliged to support him. He appeared to know already the fate which awaited him.
Bastide always firm, had an air of confidence which displayed a striking contrast with the dejection of his brother-in-law. Colard, without audacity, appeared calm and resigned. Anne Benoit's countenance expressed the deepest grief. Madame Manson was restrained, by pity for the unhappy objects who surrounded her, from displaying the joy she must have felt at the prospect of being immediately set at liberty.

The court retired to deliberate upon the sentences of punishment.
It was then that Jausion gave vent to his grief. His expressions were incoherent. "A! gentlemen," he exclaimed, "you would not be the truth, I am innocent. You will ask M. Fualdes who were his enemies. When I arrived here, the Procureur-General swore he would ruin me. On the scaffold I will speak as at the present moment.
God will judge you. They want my money; let them take it, but let them leave me my children. I am innocent. Poor children! what will become of them, without honour, without fortune; they will die in an hospital. I wish a tomb to be dug to put my wife and children with me; it will be written on it—Jausion was innocent." Let Bach, since he is condemned, declare at present the truth; let him say whether I was at Bancal's." Bach, without any concern, replied to Jausion:
"Yes, you were there; if it were not true, I should not have said so."

The court having resumed their seats, the President pronounced sentence as follows:
The woman Bancal, Bastide, Jau-sion, Colard & Bach, are condemned to death. Anne Benoit condemned to hard labour for life; Missonnier to two years imprisonment, and a fine of 50 francs. Madame Manson is acquitted, and to be instantly set at liberty. The sentence of death produced no alteration in the features of Bastide, Jau-sion continued to cry out that he was innocent, but Colard and Anne Benoit presented a spectacle truly afflicting. The sentence, which struck the one, seemed to overwhelm the other. The unhappy Anne Benoit exclaimed, in a dol-ful accent, which pierced the heart of all: "Gentlemen, sentence me like Colard; I wish for death; if I die, I wish to die." This heartfelt eloquence, at this awful moment, produced upon the auditory an effect difficult to explain; tears were shed in unison with those of this wretched female. Colard, in whom a capital sentence excited no concern, could not hear that passed upon Anne Benoit, without betraying the most profound affliction.

The jury, considering the importance of the confession of Bach, to the interests of society and justice, earnestly supplicated the court to recommend him to the clemency of the King.

which took place at Rio Janeiro on this occasion. The city was illuminated three nights in succession, and their most faithful majesties, with every branch of the Royal Family, paid their respects to Monsignore, the Archbishop of Dmetrio, Nuncio Apostolic to the Brazilian Court. The city of Pekin is erected into a Patriarchate; the Patriarch is a Portuguese monk, from Macao, of the order of St. Francis. Pekin has also an Inquisition, which under the direction of some Portuguese Inquisitors from Goa. The education of all classes is invested in the hands of the Jesuits, as well as the high officers of state. The Confessor of the Emperor is a Portuguese Jesuit, and is declared by law the next person in the Empire to the sovereign, and an union of power invested in his hands. These crafty men have adopted the Chinese costume, and are more splendily clothed than any of the Mandarins. The Jesuits have received the privilege to wear their nails an inch longer than any of the nobility, the Princes of the blood excepted; and any Mandarin who dare presume to have his slippers within two inches as long as the slippers of the Priests is to be punished with death. The missionaries brought for the court of Brazil some magnificent pieces of China, on which is depicted the and face of Lord Amherst with his Chinese majesty; and those facetious orientals have had the audacity to caricature that splendid embassy, which would have done honour to the first and most brilliant court in Europe."
