With regard to the political character of this publication, he scorns any concealment—it will be decidedly of the Federal cast: That federalism, which was known and prac tised in the day of Washington -that fede ralism, for which Hamilton wrote & fought and for which Montgomery fell—that fede ralism, which, with a large and comprehen-sive view, embraces all characters, so far as they augment the prosperity and the gran-deur of their country, and which turns an eve of the most transcendant disdain on the little, despicable, mean personal bickerings for office—that federalism, which would raise, ennoble, and aggrandize the character of our dear and beloved country, and in opposition to that detestable, mush com feder ralism, whose only aim is to raise and to ag grandize private families—that federalism, that exuls in the spectacle of our country's greatness; that delights to behold the star-spangled banner glittering over every sea; our commerce bounded by no other restric-tions than those of the ocean—that federalism, that cheers the honest husbandman at his plough, the merchand at his desk, and the mechanic at his anvil. He is too old, and the grave too near, for the subscriber to turn an apostate now; to lend himsel to the corn an apostate now; to lend himsel to the scurry meanness of individual ambition; or to mistake his own welface for the welface o his country. These are the federal sentiments of the Edisor, and such as he will be governed by until the hour of his dissolution. He scales not individual extraord.

tion. He seeks not individual patronage, he looks for support on his countrymen at large—if he fails in this appeal to their confidence, he is content to remain unnoticed
