Last autumn owed a field of wheat on a clover which was dressed and treated cily as an adjoining one, similar t as to aspect and the nature of soil. After Christmas, one hem began to fail in many placincreasing daily: and about rch, there were several large ts, which only exhibited a few ved plants. A friend had given about thirty bushels of salt, that been collected from the sweep s of Irish pork. In April, I sowthis salt, and as nearly as I can acre, all over the field where ts did not enerese and those
