From the New York Evening Post.

The Murder of Colvin. The mystery in which this affair is involved, has excited great interest in the public to see a full history of the whole transaction. A summary of this history, as far as it has been developed, we are now enabled to furnish from a friend, who has read the printed trial.

From our Correspondent.

Office of the Connecticut Mirror, Hartford, Jan 3, 1820. The Vermant Murder.

The interest and curiosity of the public have been highly excited upon the subject of the trial and conviction of Stephen and Jesse Boorn, of Manchester, Vermont, for the suppised murder of Russel Colvin. who is alive, and has returned to h s family and home. There have been various stories in circulation respecting this mysterious affair, some of which have reflected little credit upon the judiciary of Vermont, or upon the intelligence of the jury. The marvellous dream in particular, has been a fruitful topic of speculation. We have a few days since, received from Rutiand, Vermont, a pamphlet containing an account of the trial of the Boorns, taken from the minutes of the Hon. Chief Justice, together with some particulars relative to the discovery of the supnosed deceased. The testimony, which is obviously only a orief, occupies about 26 pages. It is much confused, and calculated to throw but little light upon the mysterious affair. From this publication we learn, that Colvin had married a sister of the Boorns-had several children. and was at times unable to provide for his family all the necessaries of life. He consequently became somewhat dependent upon the Boorns, who were not much pleased with the necessity of administering re and on one occasion took a child with him, and was absent nine months. From the testimony, it appears, that seven years ago last spring Russel Colvin, a son of his about 10 years old, and two Boorns, were at work together, heaping up stones in a field. A quarrel ensued between Stephen Boorn and Colvin; the former struck the latter several times; the boy was frightened, and run to the house-and Colvin dis-appeared. Whenever the Boorns were questioned upon the subject, they generally stated that he run off to the woods. They had often threatened him previously; & some time afterwards said the had gone to the devil, 'to hell,' &ci

It seems, however; that about 4 Majorty the King of Spain requested his Imperial Main in a private letter, to wend for the Jesuit less her shusband, was absolutely deed. Stephen Boorn told his air and private letter, for the good state, and for the foundation, was deal, and he knew it. consequence of fright he suppose ed that something came in at the window, and was then behind him on the bed. He stated the particulars of the quarrel, as aforesaid .-According to this relation, Stephen Boorn gave Colvin several blows with a small club-brought him to the ground-broke his skull-the blood gushed out. By this confession the father of the Boorns was made a party. Jesse B. stated that before Colvin was dead, he took him by the legs, Stephen by the shoulders, and the old man round the body; carried him to an old cellar, the old man then cut his throat with a penknife, and they buried him in said cellar, between day light and dark; and one of them kept watch.

In about 18 months afterwards, he stated that he took up the bones and buried them under the floor of a barn. The spring following, the barn was burnt, and the bones were then again taken up, pounded 'to pieces and thrown into the river .-The father scraped up a few pieces and put them into the hollow of a stump near the road. It appears by the testimony of another witness. that some fragments of bones were found in the stump, and some pieces supposed to be a thumb, and fin ger nails. Stephen Boorn-made a written confession, not materially differing from the foregoing. These confessions were rejected by the court, as it appeared that some inducements had been offered to the prisoners to confess; but they doubtless had a powerful effect on the minds of the jury. It appears bones had been found in the cellar last spring, but they proved not to be human bones. There is nothing said in the trial of the dream, which has been so frequently mentioned in the papers; and we are therefore led to believe it a hoax, played off upon some of our brother editors. by one of those vastly witty people, who deem it the ne plus ultra of ingenuity to impose upon a publisher.

The two Boorns were sentenced to be executed on the 28th of Janu ary inst. but the general assembly of that state being then in sess on, a petition for a pardon or commuta the number of manuscripts lief. We are led to infer also from din the ruins of Herculaneum, some parts of the testimony, that which have been there enclosed Colvin had previously been derangther the little Nov. by a vote of 104 to 31, the punishment of Jesse Boorn was changed to imprisonment for life; and Stephen was left to suffer agreeably to sentence, by a vote of 97 to 42. Immediately after, a notice was published in the Rutland paper, requesting information of the said Colvin, if alive; and the man-ner of his discovery has been made known to our readers. Colvin ar-rived at Manches er on the 22d December. On his entrance into that town, the assemblage of people was immense, and the firing of cannon echoed the joy and satisfaction ma nifested on the occasion. Stephen Boorn was immediately taken from prison and introduced to his old acquaintance; some communication. passed between them, but Colvin was too much confused to hold a regular conversation with any one. PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Message from the President of the United States, transmitting a Report of the Commissioners of the Public Buildings.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the U. States. I transmit to Congress a report from the Commissioner of the Public Buildings, which, with the accompanying documents, will exhibit the present state of those buildings, and the expenditures thereon, during the year ending the 30th of Sept.

Office of Commissioner of Public Buildings.

Washington, Dec. 24, 1819. The Commissioner of the Public Buildings in the City of Washington, has the honour of submitting to the President of the U. States the enclosed papers, marked A, B, C, exhibiting the progress made in, and expenditures on account of hose buildings, during the year ending the 30th Sept. last.

Respectfully submitted. SAML. LANE.

[A.] Samuel Lane, Esq. Commissioner of Public Buildings.

In presenting a report of the progress of the work on the Capitol of the U States, according to annual custom, permit me to congratulate you on the completion of the public rooms and of the necessary offices for the reception of both Hous es of Congress. The work has been well executed, with great solidity. and with an attention to convenience and elegance, which make the arrangements for the National Legislature equal to those of any other country, and which, I hope, will meet public approbation. The work on the centre of the Capitol has also been carried on, during the past season, in a style conformable to the other parts of the building. The walls are ra sed to the height contemplated in the estimates presented at the last session of Congress, and workmen are now engaged in preparing the materials of freestone for the continuance of the work. The expense of this part of the building has not exceeded the estimates-but a large amount of excess above what was expected, having occurred in finish-ing the wings, I think it my duty to point out some of the causes which have occasioned it and which will serve to explain, that it has not arisen from misapplication of the pub lie money, but from some omissions, and unforeseem expenses that could not be controlled.

In my estimate of 1819, I stated, from information then given me, that there was on hand sufficient copper for the roofs, and gias for both wings-it has been found necessary to pur hase an additional quantity of copper, to the amount of dance, during the last year, viz: Of the Executive Offices. The porticos to the north fronts. of six Ionic columns each, with their bases, capitals, entablatures, and pediments, of cut stone, have been put up. The porticos have been rooted, and the roofs covered. with patent milled slate. The gutters laid and covered with copper. Four flights of cut stone steps, to the outside of each of those buildings, ascending to the principal floors, have been put up, and two flights of stone steps in the inside or each building, to communicate with the basement stories, have been made and put up. The floors of the porticos have been prepared of

Seneca stone, and laid, the stone of superior quality and durability .-Spout stones have been preparen & set, to convey the water of the roof from the buildings. 🛬

The floors of the principal stories of the buildings, and which are supported by the groined arches of the basement, have been laid with stock brick. Cut stone cills have those stories, and they form a pare of the general floor. The door ways and windows have been trimmed' with jambs, linings and architraves, The doors have been made, hinged, and locks put on. The window shutters of the principal story have been made and hung in two heights. Two stories of stairs, of five flights to each story, have been put up in each of the offices, with mahogany hand raiss balustres, &c. The garret and second story floors have been laid of best 5.4 heart pine 12. the whole of these stories connter floored and pugged, to guard against fire.
