200 Dollars Reward.

Ran away from the subscriber, on the 20th ult. without the least cause, a negro, named CHARLES, 18 or 19 years of age, about 5 feet 5 or 6 inches high, a tolerable stout limbed fellow, and well made, but not active. He is a dark mulatto, with thick lips, rather flat nose, and round face, and when spoken to indicates cunning from his artful and insinuating manner. Charles had on when he absconded a grey close bodied coat with several holes in the sleeves, kersey pantaloons, coarse stockings, and an old fur hat much worn.—Charles will probably endeavour to get to the Eastern Shore of Maryland, where I purchased him, or to Charles county, where he has recently been. I will give, if he is taken out of the state of Maryland, $200, If taken in Baltimore $100 if in the city of Washington or Annapolis $30, and if in Prince-George's $20, provided he is secured in jail so that I get him again. Charles has been accustomed to wait on me as a body servant, and is very artful.

PROPOSALS,

For publishing, in the City of Annapolis, a Periodical Work, to be entitled,

THE RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY REPOSITORY,

To be edited by a society of Laymen members of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The leading views of the Editors are stated in the following note, by one of the persons, who will be actively employed in the selection of the matter for publication.

The Religious Magazines which have been heretofore published by members of the church, are, some of them, very useful as far as they go. My objection to them is, that they do not attempt to give us information, of which the laity, and indeed clergy, stand in much need, and which is with great difficulty to be obtained. In this country the laity have a considerable participation in the affairs of the church, and ought to possess an intimate knowledge of its history, constitution and laws. As church wardens, and trustees or vestrymen, as well as delegates to the convention, they have important and very solemn duties to perform, and with a knowledge of these duties, it ought to be the business of these magazines to furnish them. The subjects usually discussed in them have already been explained and enforced by pious and learned divines, with as much ability as could be expected from more modern writers, and a knowledge of what we are to believe and do in order to be saved," may be communicated to our readers as well by selections, as by any original matter which we might be able to offer to them. From the writings of approved divines, not always to be met with, even in possession of the clergy, we shall most frequently collect what it is deemed necessary to give on christian doctrine and duty. The magazine will aim to be useful, and desires no other reputation.

I am induced to hope that, besides furnishing the laity with useful information in regard to the duties which are imposed upon them, some hints, worthy of their attention, may occasionally be given to the clergy. While they act up to their ordination vows; endeavour to frame and fashion their lives according to the doctrine of Christ, to make themselves wholesome examples of the flock of Christ, and reverently obey their Bishops, following with a glad mind and will their godly admonitions, they deserve, and there is in the laity of the church of Maryland generally, every disposition to honour and support them. If, however, at any time, any of them forget to pay due regard to their own solemn engagements, and instead of loving to "dwell together in unity," a design should be manifested to introduce disorder and misrule into the church, to oppose its legitimate authority, or to assume powers which do not belong to them, then it is not only the right, but it becomes the imperative duty of the laity, to animadvert upon such conduct with unsparing severity.

Approving entirely of the forms prescribed, and of the doctrines agreed to by our Church, it will be no part of the business of the Magazine to recommend or even to connive at, any new inventions, whether in tenets, or discipline or worship.

TERMS.

The Repository shall be published twice a month, each number to contain sixteen pages royal 8 vo—Price two dollars per annum, one half payable in advance, and the other half upon the delivery of the 12th number.

From the Evening Post.

Piracy and murder.—We have received by the mornings mail, a small pamphlet of 40 pages, published at Charleston, S. C. and entitled "Particulars of the piracies committed by the commanders and crew of the Buenos Ayrean ship Independencia, and those of sloop Mary, of Baltimore, and Lawrence, of Charleston, wherein is accurately described the murder of capt. Sunley, and four of the crew of the British brig Ann," &c. This pamphlet ought to be published in every newspaper in the United States for the benefit of that community for whose advantage, it is expressly expressed in the preface, to have been written, and more particularly that of seafaring men. "In publishing the following sheets to the public (says the preface,) we are actuated by an earnest and sincere desire that it may prove beneficial to the community at large and especially to that part of it which consists of seafaring people." We are extremely sorry for to our surprise and regret, we find when we arrive at the last page, that no right secured, according to law. We are extremely sorry for this, because, though we grudge not the profits of the pamphlet to the publisher, (saying nothing at present of the question whether it is a fit subject for copy right,) it is very desirable on public considerations, that such facts as are here collected should circulate as widely and speedily as possible. We confine ourselves to one of the atrocities here recorded, with a view as well to put the reader in possession of the interesting intelligence it contains, as to aid the sale of the pamphlet itself. The following is the narrative of the barbarous excesses committed on the capt. and crew of the British brig Ann, by one Henry Neill and his crew, of the sloop Mary, and who, we are grieved to say, has hitherto eluded the grasp of justice, as well as the ringleader of the boat's crew who perpetrated the outrages in question, viz. one Peter Frederick Miller. The story is taken from the confessions of some one who became evidence on the trial of those who suffered conviction and death.

"On the morning of the 28th, we discovered several sail; one of them proved to be the British brig Ann of Barbaro.' We were ordered by the captain to arm ourselves and man the boat. The following men were chosen—Peter Frederick Miller, who was to act as commander, William Smith, John Furlong James Chase, William Shelton, John Read, S. Chase and Wm. Chamberlain. When they left the sloop the captain urged them to fight bravely: He presented each of them a glass of spirits, & gave them the following instructions:—When you get on board the brig, keep perfectly silent as respects your errand. If you should be asked to drink, refuse absolutely refuse. If they should ask you any improper questions, or say that you were known, you must immediately shoot them. After having received these precautions, we went upon our expedition to the brig. We came up to her at four o'clock in the afternoon. The captain hailed us and "desired to know our business? We answered "that we would acquaint him when we were on board." After some hesitation he threw us a rope, we then boarded the brig according to previous arrangement. Peter F. Miller took possession of the brig, with little ceremony, as prize master, and ordered her crew into the forecastle. Capt. Sunley, the master of the brig was ordered aft.—A sentinel was placed as a centinel at the cabin door, to prevent the possibility of rescue. The men told that they could not get into the cabin, as it was full of coffee &c. that in consequence they all lived aft. Miller ordered them down the

The new made prize master, Peter Frederick Miller, now exercised all the privileges of a tyrant. He assumed the most determined authority, and ordered about as though they were slaves. Approaching the captain of the brig, he arrogantly demanded to know where he was from and where he was bound. The captain, with a mildness & goodness of a perfect gentleman, replied that he was from Matanzas bound to Falmouth, Eng. for orders, and he expected to be sent to Hamburgh—Miller then asked of what his cargo consisted? He replied coffee and sugar. Have you any money on board? was the next question, which our prisoner thought was of too much importance to omit, Captain Sunley replied he had not any. But, returned Miller, I know better than all this, for it is not be supposed that you would undertake a voyage so extensive without having some money on board. You must, therefore, tell me where it is, or suffer the consequences. The captain of the brig seemed resigned to feel all the horrors of his situation. Those dreadful forebodings which frequently agitate the mind and destroy its wonted energies, were under the influence of apprehension appeared to press heavily upon him. And alas! they were truly prophetic ages of his own lamentable and unhappy fate. He was now in the power of a set of men whose feelings were callous as adamant, and in whose bosoms pity had long since ceased to reside. It was in vain for him to endeavour to preserve the property of his owners, which he had undertaken to have been the promise of his heart. Nay, after Miller had informed them of what money was on board, they still remained unsatisfied, and made their search under the plausible pretext for concealed crimes of the most horrible nature.

While these things were acting on board of the sloop came up. The prize ordered captain Sunley and his crew to go on board of the boat arrived with them, capt. Neill hailed them—and when alongside, they were all ordered on board, which order was instantly obeyed. Neill very politely addressed captain Sunley in the following words: "Pray, Mr. Sunley, the captain of that brig?" Sunley replied the other. "Why, sir, you will then go on board, and bring your papers for my inspection." "I have them with me, sir," replied Sunley. "O, you have, well, I suppose you then accompany me to the cabin, where I shall have a minute examination." They then went into the cabin, where they remained about the space of an hour. At the end of this time they both came on deck, when capt. Neill ordered the brig's crew to be confined in the sloop. He then told Mr. Sunley that he might go on board the brig; and gave him orders to the prize master (Miller) the following effect: to alter the course of the brig and to follow her wind, and stood for the Capes. When she came up, Miller was ordered them to send her on board, which they did. The brig's crew consisted of seven men, who were now confined on board the sloop—there was also a female passenger, who was very much alarmed at the manœuvres of Neill, which were easily divined: having the brig's crew in confinement, and intended to seduce to follow their tunes) and sending two of the crew (Peterson and Read) armed with pistol,) with directions that if any man should take his eyes off them they got on board the brig, they went up to the prize master and informed him that he had particular orders of Captain Neill, that the crew of the brig should be murdered—Miller, then gave the following orders for each of the crew to be ready, and when he fired his pistol they must "each take his man." A few minutes had elapsed when the cruel order was executed, Miller himself setting the example by wounding capt. Sunley.

We shall endeavour to give a more full and perspicuous account of this dreadful transaction, as the wounded feelings will permit. It appears as Miller made a report of the work of death without any interruption. The crew, when, these murderous villains like the hungry lion, fell on the fenceless prey. They showed no mercy to intercede
