

POETRY.

From Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, for April. [Received at the Office of the New-York Commercial Advertiser.]

The following touching Verses are taken from a Newcastle Newspaper, the "Tyne Mercury."

A WINTER MORNING. It was upon a wintry morn,— When snow flakes on the wind were borne,

The keen black frost had scarcely failed, And slept and rain by turns assailed— I marked, as where in warmth I stood, And the sight did almost freeze my blood.

A little infant, on a stone, Chilled and shivering, sat alone.

The snow fell thick and fast, yet he Did never speak, but piteously Upon each passer, with a sigh, Bent his little, tearful eye— Yet of him notice none was taken, He seemed to be by all forsaken, As cold and shivering on the stone, The little sufferer sat alone.

He asked not aid—he looked for one Who came not—who, alas! was gone For ever from him—ne'er was he Again that guilty one to see, Not e'er again was that sweet boy To warm his mother's heart with joy; For she, that morn, upon that stone, Had left him there to sit alone.

At length his fears his silence broke, And thus the little lost one spoke: "Alas! methinks she lingers long—I cannot see her in the throng, I strain my eyes to look in vain, Alas! she will not come again— And yet she promised, when alone She left me sitting on this stone.

"Oh, mother! come to me, for I Am cold—and sick—and verily Methinks the night seems to fall, For darkness shuts me out from all I saw before—I feel not now The damp snow falling on my brow, And sure the cold has left this stone, Where I have sat so long alone.

"Come, mother, come! nor tarry longer, For oh! this weakness grows still stronger;

Come, mother! take me to my home— How faint I am—come mother—come— He said no more—his little breast Heaved but once, then sunk to rest. Now calm, and colder than the stone Where first he sat, he lies alone.

But soon that wretched mother came, With her eyes in tears & her heart in flame; And—God!—how she stood in mute surprise

When first the vision met her eyes, When first his little face she knew— So chang'd from the last and lively hue It wore that morn, when she left him alone

In tempest and storm, on a damp cold stone.

But who shall tell the pangs she felt, As madly in the snow she knelt And clas'd his hand round, in her deep distress,

In all his chilling unction?— The tear at once forsook her eye, And she rais'd a harsh and horrid cry, That seem'd on its rushing wing to bear The last of her knowledge of grief and care.

Oh! ne'er will she taste sweet rest again— For madness reigns in her troubled brain,

For her boy she calls thro' day and night; In coldness—in darkness; in pale moonlight—

"My boy! my boy! have you seen my boy?"

Not another thought does her mind employ;

Not a gleam of hope from the past can she borrow,

As she wanders along in the grasp of her sorrow.

To Bridge Builders.

The Commissioners for building a Bridge over South-River, distant from the city of Annapolis about four miles, are prepared to contract for the building thereof; they therefore invite the attention of Bridge builders to this subject, and request that they will forward their proposals, or apply in person. As the commissioners wish to have the advice of persons more experienced in the erection of bridges than themselves, the materials and construction of the bridge will be determined on after a proper consideration of the estimates and plans which may be submitted to them. Any communication addressed to the commissioners of the South-River Bridge Company Annapolis, will receive immediate attention. Henry Mayncdier, President. June 29

The Editors of National Intelligencer, the Federal Gazette, Baltimore, and the Maryland Republican, Annapolis, will insert the above for six weeks, and forward their accounts to this office.
