New York, Oct. 4.
Late from England.

By the arrival last night of the packet ship Albion, Williams, in the short passage of 32 days from Liverpool, have received London papers to the 30th August, and Liverpool to the 1st of Sept. The trial of the Queen was progressing...
The papers are filled with the examination of the witnesses, and which is of the same disgusting nature as furnished by the late arrivals. Appearances are more favourable for the Queen than at first, and much of the testimony given in against her has been invalidated. We have not time to recapitulate the mass of testimony published, but shall endeavour in our next to give a summary thereof, which occupies more than fifty columns of close matter in the English papers.

When Theodore Majocchi first appeared at the bar, Mr. Brougham asked him whether he could speak or understand English, and was answered in the negative. It now appears that he lived sometime in England, and there is no doubt he understands English very well. Several letters have been received from Gloucester in London, which stated that the writer there, who is Majocchi well, when he lived in that place with a gentleman who brought him from Italy. The letters mention that he always spoke in high terms of the Queen, and that he said he was offered a considerable sum of money, and a place for life in her household, if he would appear against her. This had been made known to Alderman Wood. The extraordinary memory of Majocchi, as to very minute events, his precision as to dates, and his particularity in describing and recounting every circumstance, seems to have excited the astonishment of the people of London.

The Queen still continues to receive and reply to numerous addresses. We learn from a passenger, that the general opinion was, that the trial of the Queen would result in her favour.

The counsel for the Queen had asked upon government for a further sum of 10,000*l.* to send for witnesses, and to pay the expenses of the trial.

The editor of the Traveller apologises for defiling his columns with most of the evidence, but observes that the responsibility of all the pernicious consequences rests upon those who have forced this noxious subject on the country.

The Traveller observes, that the "select corps" of witnesses against the Queen are nearly exhausted.

The following witnesses have been examined on the trial of the Queen.

Theodore Majocchi, was servant to the Queen, had a quarrel with Bergami and his family.

Petrizzo, mate of the police, a distant relation of the captain, therefore felt a proportionate part of the resentment owed by the captain against Bergami, for non-compliance with the promise of giving him a present of $5,000.

Vincenzo Giarullo, captain of the vessel hired by the Queen, he quarrelled with Bergami, because he would not pay him the 6,000 dollars promised as a compensation.

Francis de Bois, cook, admits his leaving the Queen's service on account of the persecution of Bergami's brother, and went away without any character.

Pietro Pachi, styling himself agent to the inn at Trieste, saw through a key hole, covered over with canvass, through which canvass was a small hole, about half the size of a keyhole, did not know if the said hole could be seen by any one within.

The Statesman says, that there has been as great variety among the journals as to the question which accomplices it, and the impression which it conveyed. The identical words which she made use of on the memorable occasion of her recognizing Majocchi, was, "Traitor?" (traitor?) not "Pheodora."

The London Traveller of the 24th of Aug. observes, "We are happy in being able to assure our readers that her majesty has, so late as this morning, expressed to her immediate friends the most perfect confidence that she will be able to establish her innocence, and to triumph over the third, as she has already done over the first and second conspiracies against her honour."

The second witness in the trial against the Queen, was the mate of a small trading ship, and has been paid for the loss of his time at the rate of $160*l.* per annum. The ship has been paid at the rate of $400 per annum. This last man received from the Princess of Wales $750 a month for the use of his ship, out of which he had to pay the wages of 22 men, and all other expenses.

The cross-examination of Majocchi closed on the 6th day, and the Times says, "We believe we may congratulate the nation on the exposure of the conspiracy against the Queen, by the mere cross-examination of the first witness produced against her Majesty. Every thing that Majocchi had previously sworn with respect to the soliloquy of her Majesty's bed room, now appears to be utterly false. This wretched witness was humiliated by the British Ambassador, Lord Stewart, a man of extraction and rank as that of Bergami, of fortunes almost as rapid."

On the 9th day, the London Evening Mail of Aug. 21st, says, "Up to this time the only two credible witnesses examined, were the captain of the Corsican Levant, and the evidence acquiesced the Queen of her proper familiarity with Bergami. But now, fortunate it was that the House of Lords allowed the daily publication of their proceedings. In this circumstance originated the happy discovery of Majocchi's Gloucester connection, which at once disarmed his evidence. The acknowledgment of the immense bribes received by Giarullo and Petrizzo, the captain and mate of the vessel in which her majesty sailed, was drawn from their own mouths. Seven hundred and fifty dollars a month were all that the captain received for the freight of his vessel from the Queen of England—while, as he justly argued, after he paid and fed his crew, left little enough for himself; but by his new speculation, in which he is engaged, he at once gains, even by his own confession, (and the public may rely on it if they don't know all yet,) one thousand dollars a month, not clear of expense without the wear and tare of his ship, without pay and feed for his crew! This fellow, therefore, is enriched by her, and the same may be said of his mate. Never was swearing paid for at such a rate in either Italy or England before. And here we would stop for a moment, and advise the votaries of villainy to consider at how much more cost, a rate they are obliged to pursue their criminal enterprise than those who are added to the employment of innocent and legal objects.

From the 9th to the 11th day, the House were engaged in discussing a question whether the Counsel should be permitted to cross-examine the witnesses in the manner they desired, which was finally determined upon by a majority of 5. Lord Erskine then moved that the House adjourn to afford time to the Queen to prepare for her defence; and that a list of the remaining witnesses against her, with a specification of the time & places to which their testimony would apply, should be furnished her. On this motion there were contents 61 noncontents 160.

Crowds of respectable persons continue to assemble daily in St. James' square, to await the approach of her Majesty, and greet her with the most enthusiastic acclamations. As her majesty left the house on Saturday, several ladies were assembled, who pressed to touch her clothes, and were perceived to shed tears of sympathy and affection. All the way to the House of Lords the same lively scene was presented, and the same demonstrations of admiration evinced. The soldiery are most respectful, and seem to join in the sentiments of the multitude.—E. Mail.

The expenses of the establishment at St. Helena is to be diminished. Sir Hudson Lowe, and the land forces are to be recalled. The island in future to be garrisoned by marines, and the command of the station to be entrusted to an admiral.

Aug. 30. Half past 8 o'clock. Shortly after the division, counsel were called to the bar, and informed by the Lord Chancellor that the house had agreed to the proposition made by her majesty's counsel for the cross-examination of the witnesses, viz. to suspend and resume the cross-examination at their discretion.

The last witness, Barbara Kerresse, was then recalled, and cross-examined by Brougham. She stated that there were two men servants in the Princess's room at the time witness was making the bed, as she had before stated, which two persons she could not swear were not in the service of her Royal Highness.

Majocchi, on his first cross-examination was asked, "Did you ever write a letter to be taken back either to Bergami or Schavina?" Never, because it is my mistress to know very little of writing. On his examination on Thursday, being asked, "How long were you in England the first time you came over, when you lived with Mr. Hyatt, at Gloucester?" he answered, "I cannot remember, because I have not the book in which I made the minute."

Rast dt. Aug. 20. The King of Prussia arrived on the 11th inst. at Teplitz, where he was complimented by the Captain of the Circle, the name of the Emperor of Austria.

Madrid, Aug. 14. The Cortes have adopted more of the articles of the plan of a National Militia, for enrolling all Spaniards from the age of 18 to 30.

We learn that on Saturday last Ministers had received advice from Paris that Marshal Saut, Duke of Damatta, was arrested under a charge of being implicated in one of the 18th inst. and that more than 100 officers of rank were suspected to be concerned in the intended revolt; but as no intimation of such arrest was given in the journals which came to hand on Sunday, we did not feel justified in mentioning the circumstance. The private letters delivered yesterday, however, concur in stating the fact, and say that the plot had a much more extensive bottom than was at first expected. All this must be taken up by the intelligent English public with jealousy. They have detected the numerous and base artifices that the Ultra-Royalists have from time to time resorted to, to agitate and alarm the people, who are desirous of repose—and this may be only a portion of the insidious means of operating in favour of the Aristocratic Elections.

Brussels papers to the 25th inst. have arrived. An article from that city dated the 24th, says that an English messenger from Italy, passed through it the day before on his way to Holland, with four Italians, who, it was presumed, were to give evidence on the trial of the Queen. The accounts from Naples, of the 7th inst. state that the utmost silence was maintained respecting the subject of the Depuration from Palermo. According to private letters, the Depuration went for the purpose of negotiating the independence of Sicily, to which the Neapolitan Government would not listen for a moment. Letters from Ancona are quoted, stating that preparations were making in the Marche for Austrian troops expected from Lombardy.

From Frankfurt it is stated that nothing was talked of there but a confidential Note of Austria, addressed to the Germanic Diet, calling the attention of the states of Germany to the dangers which it alleges menace legitimate sovereigns from the examples of Spain and Naples.

A Vienna article asserts that the Emperor Alexander is expected there about the end of the present month.

There is another report, on the authority of a letter from Leghorn, of a dreadful revolution having taken place at Constantinople; it is added, that one-fifth of the population had fallen victims in the contest which took place.

By the arrival last evening of the packet ship Albion, capt. Williams, from Liverpool, we have received from our correspondent a regular issue of the London Courier, of the 30th of August inclusive, which enables us to give this evening, the proceedings against the Queen in the House of Lords, up to the 13th day of her trial. Most of the evidence consists of cross-examination of the witnesses against her, but as it is principally confined to questions put for the purpose of detecting them in tripping; we do not think it necessary always to give more than the substance.

This morning her Majesty arrived in town at 10 o'clock. Her Council had expressed a wish that she should be at attendance of the House of Lords as early as possible, in order that they might have personal communication with her on any subject which might arise in the course of the examination of the witnesses. Her Majesty was as usual preceded by Alderman Wood who, by her majesty's command, gave orders for the state carriage to be brought to the door.

At 12 past ten, her majesty announced that she was ready to proceed to Palace-Yard, and immediately afterwards entered her carriage, which was thrown open for the benefit of the spectators. Her Majesty wore a dove coloured hat the brim of which inclined very much, both at the front and back. This was ornamented with plumes of feathers of the same colour—around her neck her Majesty wore a ruffe of extraordinary magnitude. The people assembled to see her pass were few in number, and even those manifested but little enthusiasm. As her majesty passed Carlton Palace she turned her eyes in an opposite direction with an assumed air of disgust. This assumed to please her followers, and they noticed it by cries of "horow" and loudly clapping their hands. In the windows of the house in Pall Mall and Lockport streets, we did not notice a respectable person. At 10 minutes after 11 o'clock she arrived in front of the House of Lords. The military and the officers of the House received her Majesty in the usual manner; the soldiers presented arms, and the music played the Royal salute. Her majesty proceeded to her retiring room, where she was immediately attended by Mr. Brougham.

Assault on the Duke of Wellington. The treatment received yesterday by the Duke of Wellington, was more serious than it has been represented. Long after the Queen had left the House of Lords a party of about 200 of the populace remained at the end of Great George-street, as if lying in wait for his grace. On his approach they pressed close on him, and assailed him with a most tremendous yell. One fellow caught at his bridle, and another attempted to seize his stirrup, apparently with a view to unhorse him. The parole seeing his Grace's danger rushed forward, drew their cutlasses. A severe scuffle ensued. One of them aimed a blow at the man who attempted to unhorse the Duke, but it was turned aside, and struck a woman on the arm, who received a deep wound. In the mean time the Duke menaced his pace, and got off into the Park. His Grace and the patrol were pelted with mud and oyster shells all the way down Great George-street.

Paris, Aug. 21. The funds which had fallen to 77.25, have subsequently recovered to 77.99.

The Court of Peers is ordered to assemble immediately to proceed without delay to the trial of the individuals arrested at Paris.

The Court Royale of Paris, all the Chambers being assembled held yesterday a secret sitting, which is supposed to relate to the conspiracy.

The manner in which government first received an intimation of the conspiracy, was by a fortunate but most singular chance. A female who was accustomed to read the newspapers at the Tuilleries, in returning the journal she had borrowed, left in it, unawares, a letter that had just reached her. This letter was to the effect of advising her instantly to quit Paris, in order to avoid the consequences of a revolution that was about to break out. This letter fell thus into strange hands, was read, and the female to
