MARYLAND GAZETTE.

Annapolis, Thursday, Dec. 21.

Captain Rogers, of the ship James Monroe, arrived at New-York, reports verbally, that the bill of pains and penalties had passed the House of Lords, but that it was supposed it would be thrown out in the House of Commons.

LATE FROM ENGLAND.

New York, Dec. 14. The regular & fast sailing packet ship James Monroe, Capt. Rogers, arrived off Sandy Hook on Wednesday afternoon, and came up yesterday morning, from Liverpool, whence she sailed on the 4th of November. By this arrival we are put in possession of London papers to the evening of the 2d inclusive, and Lloyd's and Shipping Lists to the 31st of October, and have made very copious and interesting extracts from the latter-and as much from the former as our limits will permit. We publish to-day the concluding part of the Lord Chancellor's speech on the second reading of the bill, which it will be seen, is decidedly against the Queen. We learn from a passenger in the lames Monroe, who lest France the latter part of October, that a Mercantile House in Bordeaux had ceceived a letter from Madrid, dated the 5th of October, stating, that the Florides had been ceded by the Cortes to the United States. This information was announced in a Paris

the act aforesaid, Therefore,
Resolved, That the commissioners gamed in the said act, be, and House of Lords proceeded with the a station at the table almost immediately, before Lord Grey and Lord Holland, and addressed the house.

He was decidedly against the Queen. Lord Ersung followed in favour of the Queen, and after proceeding some time in commenting on the evidence, when he suddenly paused. This was not particularly noticed at first as it appeared as if he was looking over the minutes placed on the table before him; but after some time had elapsed, without resuming his speech, some of the Peers became alarmed, and rose from their seats to proceed to his Lordship .-The anxiety of the whole House was then aroused, as the Larl fell forward on the table in senseless state. There were cries of "Open the windows"-"Some water." The Lord Chancellor and Lord Li-Lord Erskine's assistance.

They, with the assistance of Earls Grey and Carnarvon, & Lord Holland, raised his lordship; but his speech and colour were gone. They then became seriously alarmed, and instantly proceeded to convey him out of the house. The attack was

T. Tyrwhitt was in attendance, and sent to procute all possible aid.

Lord Lauderdale, after some time had elapsed, rose amidst cries of hear, hear! In a faltering tone, and evidently a good deal affected by what had just happened, he said, in order that they might have the opportunity of knowing what really was the extent of his noble friend's sudden and slarming indisposition, and of affording the noble lord time to resume his address, should he happily have strength to do so, he begged to move, that the House do adjourn for a quarter of an hour. The question was accordingly put and carried. Several of the Lords then proceeded to Mr. Cooper's room. The Lord Chancellor remained with Lord Erskine, paying him the kindest and most anxious

After the lapse of a quarter of an hour, for which the house adjourned, Lord !- skine being no better, the discussion was resumed by Lord

We presume the reader will hardly excuse us if we do not introduce the Queen to view as early as the second paragraph of our summary. The case has closed, so far as relates to the testimony, and the labours of the counsel for the respective parties. The house of lords adjourned from Monday, the 30th of October, to Thursday the 2d of November, and our latest paper is one of the morning of the latter day; but it of course furnishes us with no proceedings after the adjournment. It was supposed that the second reading of the bill would be moved on the 2d of November; and this motion will probably produce a long debate. How the question will be settled is yet a matter of uncertainty. The Times of November 2, says, "It is said triumphantly we hear, that ministers will carry the second reading of this wicked and ominous bill. Well, we reply, be it so: what does that signify? Will any man think the worse of the Queen for it?" This being the leading opposition paper, we may suppose that they think the passage of the bill pretty certain.

The latest Times has a furious article, mingled with an anger and despair, in which the editor attempts a parallel between the trial of the Queen, and that of the late Queen of France. The Courier remarks, that "the preamble of the bill was thrice proved; each successive mode of proof rising over the former in due gradation of efficacy. "1. Positively, by the evidence produced in support of the bill.

12. Comparatively, by the failure of the evidence produced against the bill.

43. Superlatively, by the suppression of the evidence in her Majesty's power, and not produced."

The Traveller of Nov. 1, says-On the 2d of November, the When the bill of Pains and Penalties shall have passed, England wil have ceased to be under the government of law."

Private letters from Madrid state, that the King of Spain had, by the advice of his privy council, refused his sanction to the proposition agreed to by the Cortes for the suppression of monastic orders.

During the discussion against the Monks, in the Cortes of Spain, the pious fathers availed themselves of the delay; and carried from the Monasteries all the moveable goods upon which they could lay their hands. Many millions of property, it is said,
