New WAY OF THINKING.—The Times which is often ery eloquent in its purely poetical accounts of processions to Brandenburg House, gives the following animated description of the 20 or 30 Scotchmen who yesterday went thither .- "The tartan dress must have awakened many a scene of mist and mountain, glen and strath, in the weaters, who evidently wore their thoughts upon their faces, while kindled eyes flashed beneath the bonnets cocked up on their brows." How beautifu. Thirty Scotchmen, with "their thoughts upon their faces," and their "bonnets cocked upon their brows," all riding in landaus to Branden burgh House!

The pretended Highland Address. We copy the following from the Morning Chronicle. It is part of a letter signed "A Member of the Highland Society of London." It appears that the real Highland Gentlemen are highly indignant at the idea of being mistaken for any of those thirty Scotsmen who went up to the Brandenburgh House on Monday, "wearing their thoughts upon their faces," and "their bonnets cocked upon their Brows," as the Tim s described them.

"In consequence of the report inserted in most of the newspapers of vesterday, that among the addresses preented to the queen on the preceding day, there was one from " The Highland Society of London," presented by a Deputation, in the Highland garb, it has became neces sary to stite that the Highland So ciety of Landon has not voted or presented any address to her majes ty; and as the report attempting to connect the address and deputation in question, with the name of that Society, appeared to have proceed ed from intentional misrepresentation, I cannot doubt your readiness to aid in laying before the public a correct statement of the facts.

"The Highland Society of London is incorporated by Parliament, for purposes entirely unconnected with the expression of any political feelings or opinions, and in point of fact, political discussions are never admitted into the Society. The propriety of this regulation must be obvious when I state, that the society comprises, in the list of its members, a great majority of all the men or rank, property and respectability connected with the Highdon is incorporated by Parliament. lands of Scotland; and necessarily includes many distinguished individuals opposed to each other in political opinions, though they unite in promoting the patriotic and benevolent objects of this institution.

"The Highland Society of London has not voted or presented any address to the Queen; neither has it interfered or given any opinion on the subject of the proceedings a gainst her majesty, and the persons who have attempted to give a fictitious importance to their own address and imputation, by assuming the name of the Society have protised upon the public a deception which deserves to be exposed."

> Proof of the utility of Missionary efforts.

A vessel arrived at Demerara from Dominica, with a number of slaves, was visited by a female who had lived on the plantation whence they came—As soon as the slaves saw her, they exclaimed: "Here are we, we came from de word of God-We bin hearing the word of God in Dominica, but we no know if we hear de word of God now. Poor me! Poor me! we no care where dem bring we, so we hear de word of God!" On being told they would find a chapel and missionaries there; in a moment their sorrow was turned into joy, and they bless thene bearer of such hap-py tydings, aghousand times; and railing those in another ship they cried out "Keep good heart, dere be chapel here!"

Is there not a chord in every heart, which vibrates to the excla-mation, ' Poor we! Poor we."
