London, March 20. Extract of a letter, dated March 2. Our latest intelligence from the armies state the advanced body of the Austrians to have halted at Monterosi, (about 20 miles north of Rome) and the cause is said to be that they find themselves not ufficiently strong for the undertak-

The army now collected together to defend the passes into the kingdom, including regulars and militia, xceed 160,000 men; and this numer is daily increasing by volunteers flocking to the borders. In the approaching contest, the greatest difculty this government has to enounter is a want of money-and his they already feel very severely. The forced loan of $,000,000 ducats s collected very slowly-for perions, particularly those connected with trade, have not really the abiity to contribute their proportion.

TAXES.

It is thought by some, that the American who is indigent or poot, American who is indigent or poot, and lives by his labour, is absolutely exempted from the payment of lases; and, it is true, that many who do pay them, are totally ignorant of the amount they pay, or how bey do pay them. I shall show hat even this class of people, are ourdened with enormous imposts, and by those rulers who try to permade them that they tave no better riends.

No wonder grechtive patronage increases, when fifteen millions of the people's money is paid for it. You have promised to give us a list of them and the money they owe; I beg you'to do it; don't spare one of them, whether he calls himself a federalist, a democrat, a sanctified moderate, or by whatsoever name he pleases. Any man who would apply the public money, put into apply the public money, put into his hands for public purposes, to his own use, would pick your pocket if it was not for the Penitentiary. Let us have them; and if the list is as long as the list of pankrupts in some of the late papers of your city, let us have it, and each man's amount after his name. Let the people see who are their triends or their worst enemies, who are pick-ing their pockets while they are throwing dust in their eyes; and, if you can find out, let us know whether suit has been brought against any or all of these defaulters-and you will much oblige a number of uninformed and much injured peo-

COUNTRY.

Penalties of Flirtation .- T verdicts [says the American] have recently been given for breach of promise of marriage-one in New-Jersey of 500 dollars, the other in Poughkeepsie of 800 dollars; and to our mortification, we have to an-nounce, that the delinquents, in both cases, were of the male sex .-If the late frequent occurrence of these cases proves the fickleness of the gentlemen, they may in return claim the merit of not enforcing the penalties of coquetry against the inconstant fiir. Perhaps the ladies. are not aware that they may incur the same premunire with ourselves, and are not at libery to break, f public taxes for the support of hearts and disappoint dreams of golappiness with impunity.—Let them, therefore, take warning by the examples before them, lest some rejected wain, with as little delicatey as the fair plaintiffs in the above cases, unveil the mysteries of courtaining before a court of justice, and reap some conquistion for the loss of a frail heart of anticipated wealth.

From the Salem Gazette.

FROM SOUTH AMERICA. Captain Brace, has favoured us with a series of a paper secently established at Bahlar efficied, Idade d'Ouro do Brazil." [The Golden Age of Brazil]; the latest date of which is February 20, filled with accounts and animating language respecting a late revolution; and also with sundry revolutionary addres-ses, songs, hymns, poems, &c.

Revolution in Brazil. - At two o' clock in the morning of the 10th instant, the regiment of artillery lele their quarters at Fort St. Pedro commanded by Col. Manuel Perdro de Fretas Guimaracy, and with their field pieces and necessary ammunition marched to the palace aquare, leaving two pieces of artillery to guard the depository of arms. The cavalry commanded by Lr. Col. Francisco de Paulo Oliveris, was posted also in the palace testing a desire to prevent the further effusion of blood. The troops being reunited, the conde Palma with the officers, retired to the hall of the Court bouse, where was installed a Supreme Military Councit, who sent immediately for the cial Government in the form practised on similar occasions which being done, the baths pecessary were administered, and the govern ment entered upon the duties of their offices, while the multitude continued to shout Viva El Roy, Viva Religion, Viva a Constitution. The phips in the harbour displayed their flags and fired salutes. On the 12th the militia were under arms, and swore to support the new government. The 13th and 14th were devoted to rejoicing, and for three nights the city was illuminated. On the 15th the tribunals were all re-opened, and the late governor embarked for Rio de Janiero in his B. M. ship Icarus, under salutes from the vessels and the forts. The Marshal also was a passenger.

There are no accounts from Rio de Janeiro later than the 3d of January, at which time it is understood the king had not signed the constitution, and had named the Conde Villa Flor, Governor for

The relation of the events of the 10th is followed with much enthusiastic language and exclamation .-"The eloquence of Demosthenes, the resolution of Pericles, and the virtue of Aristides, are about to be revived in Bahia," &c. &c.

Extraordinary Suicide.—The foreign journals lately mentioned that a Frenchman had put an end to his existence, by jumping into the crater of Mount Vesuvius. As there is no instance of the kind upon record since the days of Empidocles, we are enabled, by the clowing ex-tract of a letter from gentleman of Bristol, now on the continent, to confirm the statement in the foreign journals:-"I have now to recount a most tragical event. On the 10th of January I visited Vesuvius, in company with a Mr. Gauteret, my companion also in my voyage from Marseilless. There was nothing remarkable in his manner, except that on our return to the Hermitage, he took up a pen, and effaced his name, which he had previously written in the Hermit's book. We agreed to re visit the mountain, and on the following Thursday he called on me for that purpose; but having found the former visit prejudiciat to my health, I excused myself, and he left me seeming rather disappointed .-On reading the awful catastrophe on the following week, in the public print, I visited the Hermitage and earned the following particulars:-He came to the Hermit, on the Sunday, where he slept, after passing the whole day on the mountain. On Monday he employed himself in collecting pieces of lavar on Tuesday. after telling the Hermit he must go once more to see the source of the lava, he ascended the mountain, accompanied by his guide. He had no sooner reached the caster, then he gave his watch and has to the guide, likewise a piece of money, desiring him to impress the lava; a common practice, but probably done to divert his attention. He then enveloped himself in his mantle, and plunged into the burning crater, whence he was immediately thrown out, and presented a most horrid spectacle, and in flames. The guide saw has been only the time but the quality of all in flames. The guide saw has been only the time but the quality of descending the river of fire till the work, descending the river of fire till the could, see him no more! He has been an other objects of present left a memorandum in the book expenses. door, and, after obtaining admitcance, ran back again into the yard. He pontinued these and avoirs to draw their attention of the yard, until they were induced to follow him, Having thus obtained his wish. he led them to a barrel of ashes which had been lately removed to the wooden platform over the cellar steps: On approaching the barrel, it was perceived to be on first and the blaze having made its way. through the stave, was catching the cellar door. Thus, through the sagacity and attachment of poor Tray, the family and neighbourhood were saved from impending danger.
