

ANNAPOLIS, Thursday, Oct. 29

The Mayor of Baltimore has issued his proclamation setting apart this day as a day of Humiliation, Fasting and Prayer in this city.

[Translated from the German.] For the Maryland Gazette.

SINTRAM & HIS COMPANIONS.

CHAPTER 29.

A few days after the late sad occurrence, Sinttram was seen in the parlour of the convent, awaiting with palpitating heart, the appearance of his mother. The last time, he had seen him slumbering boy, wakened by her parting kisses, scarce knowing what were his mother's intentions in thus kissing him, and sinking back again immediately into his dreaming repose.

The chaplain stood at Sinttram's side, and seemed gratified at the melancholy beaming joy that broke forth from our hero's cheeks, like a faint reflection of the roseate morning clouds.

The lady's door opened. Wrapped in white veil, entered Verena, majestic and exalted of countenance, beckoning her son to approach the massive and grated enclosure that separated her from him. Here a violent manifestation, either of grief or joy was not to be expected.

The sacred peace that dwelt within these walls, would have sunk into a heart even less tried and purified than Sinttram's. In silence he sunk down upon his knees before his mother, kissed the garment, whose folds projected between the mazy hairs, and felt tranquil as in paradise, where every wish and interruption ceases.

"Dear mother," exclaimed he, "let me be a holy man as thou art a holy woman. I will go and live in the monastery, and perhaps at some future time, when age or weakness has overtaken the pious chaplain, I may be thought worthy of being thy confessor."

"The like surely would be a mild & paterfamilias destiny, my good child," replied lady Verena; "but it is not thine. Thou shalt remain a valiant mighty knight, and the long period of life with which we progenies of the North are usually blest, thou shalt employ in the protection of the weak, the vanquishing of the daring, and perhaps in the fulfilment of some other destination which I as yet do not clearly foresee."

"Let God's will be done," said the knight, and rose full of pious devotion and firmness.

"Now thou art really my good, my only child," replied lady Verena. "I feel that many and manifold joys shall bloom up for us. Behold our wish of seeing each other has been gratified, and thou shalt meet me again in every week, to tell me what thou hast done of noble and praise-worthy, and to carry hence with thee my counsel and my benediction."

"Then I am restored again to the happiness of my childhood," exclaimed Sinttram; "only that God has superadded strength of soul and body. Oh, how happy is the son, to whom it is given, to prefer the fruits of his life at the feet of his mother!"

Thus Sinttram left the tranquil habitation of piety, and commenced his now more noble career. Not only did he go forth wherever there was an opportunity of aiding virtue or redressing wrong, but to every stranger he opened the hospitable gates of his castle, where Rolf, almost renovated to his long-forgotten youth, dwelt as stately castellan.

Thus passed a winter of Sinttram's life, spent in virtue, and honour, and peace. Nevertheless he would sometimes exclaim, "Oh Montaucon, oh Gabriela, that I knew whether you too have cordially forgiven me."

CHAPTER 30.

Spring had again made its bright appearance in the northern regions, when Sinttram was one morning, after a gloriously concluded night combat, returning towards his ancestral castle. His men followed him gladly singing. As they approached the ancient edifice the merry sound of bugles and trumpets was heard, and the knight, spurring on his horse to greater speed, observed, "We must have received some welcome visitor, whom they thus announce to us."

Soon he observed old Rolf, preparing a table for the morning's repast under the mighty trees that stood before the gate. From every spire and wall pennons and flags fluttered to the wind, the servants ran to and fro clad in festive apparel. When Rolf discovered the knight, he clasped his hands in gladness over his aged head, and hurried back into the castle. Immediately the mazy gates were thrown open, and Rolf, with tears of joy in his eyes, presented three noble-looking men to Sinttram. Two of them were men of lofty stature—the one hoary-headed and very aged, the other fast approaching the senile age—and between them stood a beautiful youth clad in blue velvet garments, adorned with golden embroidery.

The two old ones wore German citizen's dress of black velvet, with large golden chains, to which heavy medals were affixed, round their necks. Sinttram had never before seen his noble guests, but a secret presentiment of his soul told him they were Godhard and Rudolph Lenz. But the youth in their middle—Sinttram scarce dared to hope he was one, related to the beings whose proud and gentle features were reflected in his countenance.

Godhard Lenz stepped forward, and observed with great solemnity: "This is young Angeltrame of Montfaucon, the only son of the great Baron Folko of Montfaucon. His father and mother send him to thee, well knowing thy pious and glorious chivalry, that thou mayest bring him up in strength and honour, to be at a future period as great and good a christian hero as thyself."

Sinttram dismounted. Angeltrame held his stirrup, keeping off the busy attention of the squire with these words: "I am the noblest squire of this knight, and to me belongs the service nearest his person."

Sinttram knelt down in silent prayer on the green turf, then he took up Angeltrame in his arms and raising him high towards the morning sun, he exclaimed: "With God's assistance thou shalt be like him, and thy career like his!"

Rolf ejaculated with deep emotion: "Now O Lord! let the servant die in peace." Godhard Lenz and Rudolph lay on Sinttram's bosom. The chaplain of Dronheim, who just now came to bring Sinttram his mother's morning blessing, approached the happy group, and extended his arms in benediction over all.

TOASTS

Drank at the late Agricultural Show in Worcester, Mass.

Our Mother Barth—It becomes her offspring to reflect, that like other mothers, the nutrient she affords, is dependent upon the aliment she receives.

In Government, as in Religion, having much freedom, let us not forget all restraint.

The Plough, Shuttle and Canvas—They furnish our three prime comforts—Food, Clothing, and Cash.

The Ploughing Match, and all other Matches which will test the ability of each member of our Society to perform his business in a husband-like manner.

The Farmer's Cardinal Points—Good Tools, Strong Teams, Neat Farms, Smart Wives.

CANALS—An Extract. The distance from Erie to New-York, is about 690 miles; a water communication is opened between that place, by a canal of nearly half that distance.

The distance from Erie to Philadelphia, is 520 miles; a water communication may be opened by making a canal 55 miles in length.

The distance from Erie to Baltimore is about 450 miles; a canal of about 25 miles long would complete the communication by water between these two places.

REMARKABLE LONGEVITY. There is now living in the county of Culpepper, (Va.) a man by the name of Joseph Morress, who is upwards of one hundred and twelve years of age!

Mr. M. is active and in good health, visits his neighbours, and is pleasing in conversation. His wife, who is also living, is in the hundred and fifty year of her age!

They have been married seventy nine years, and he had five children.

THE QUADRANT. Godfrey of Philadelphia invented the Quadrant now in use by seamen; Hadley of London adopted it, and gave to it his name; David Baker, a young Mechanic of Boston, has made one with a valuable improvement for which he has received a premium from the Massachusetts Mechanic Association.

Baker had previously submitted his Quadrant to the examination of D. Bowditch of this town, who expressed his approbation of it, and retained it some time in order to prove its accuracy.

On Thursday last the 10th inst. about noon, the sun was encircled with one of the most brilliant Haloes that we have ever seen. This phenomenon, we believe, is not very common; a similar one, however, was witnessed a day or two before the commencement of the severe hurricane which occurred in this state about thirteen months ago.

In Darby's "Memoir of Geography and Natural and Civil History of Florida," a new work, which we have accidentally, at this moment before us, we observe the following observation: "Haloes, as they are vulgarly called, circles round the sun and moon, are often seen, and are forerunners of rain, if not wind storms; those of the sun are less frequent, but they are always followed by very violent gales of wind; it is remarkable, that if in those haloes a break is observed, that break is always towards the quarter, from whence the wind begins."

George-town, S. C. pap.

Thirty-three sail of vessels from the Labrador coast, arrived at Boston, from 20th Sept. to the 14th instant, with their cargoes of cod-fish, amounting to 2,266,000, equal to 28,656 quintals.

PHYSICIANS. In the present day, (the London Monthly Magazine says,) the fee of a Physician in Spain is, two pence from the tradesman, ten pence from the man of fashion, and nothing from the poor.

Some noble families agree with the physician by the year, paying him annually four-score reals, that is, sixteen shillings for his attendance on them and their families.

EDUCATION.

DR. DAVIS informs the public that he has opened a Private School, in which will be taught the Latin, and Greek languages; Mathematics and Natural Philosophy. He has engaged Mr. Frederick L. Grammer as an assistant. The price of tuition is fixed at forty dollars per annum; and quarterly payments will be expected, but not in advance. Board (washing, lodging and fuel included) may be had for $150.

There are on these premises a two-story log dwelling house, switzer barn, with other necessary buildings.—A credit of twelve months will be given, the purchaser giving bond, bearing interest from the day of sale, with approved security.—On the ratification of the sale by the chancellor, and payment of the whole purchase money, a good and sufficient deed will be executed by Chas. D. Warfield, Trustee. Oct. 25th 1825.

Chancery Sale.

By virtue of a decree of the court of Chancery, the subscriber will expose to public sale, on the premises, on Friday the 16th day of November next, if fair, if not the next fair day thereafter, (Sunday excepted) The land whereon John Young now resides, on the north side of Severn. Containing about 113 acres, one negro man aged about 22 years, one negro boy, one aged about 14 the other 12 years, one negro woman and her two children (girls)—Stock of different kinds, beds, bedsteads, furniture and a variety of farming utensils. It is deemed unnecessary to give a further description of the above property as it is presumed those inclined to purchase, will view the same previous to the sale.—Sale to commence at 11 o'clock.

TERMS OF SALE.

The purchaser of the land, to give bond with security for the payment of the purchase money, within 12 months from the day of sale, with interest from the day of sale. The purchaser of the personal property, (excepting the negroes) to give bond with security, for the payment of the purchase money, within six months from the day of sale, with interest from the day of sale. The negroes to be sold for cash, payable on the day of sale. On the ratification of the sale, and payment of the purchase money, the subscriber is authorized to execute a deed Louis Gassaway, Trustee. Oct. 25.

Public Sale.

By virtue of an order of the orphans court of Anne Arundel county, the subscriber will offer at public sale, on the premises, on Friday the 9th day of November next, the personal estate of Mary Callahan, deceased, consisting of A HOUSE AND LOT, subject to a ground rent, Household and Kitchen Furniture, &c. &c. Terms of sale a credit of six months for all sums above twenty dollars, the purchaser giving bond and security, bearing interest from the day of sale—all sums under twenty dollars, the cash to be paid. William S. Green, Executor. Oct. 25.

20 Dollars Reward.

Books from the school of Anne Arundel county on Tuesday night last, WILLIAM CHAMBERLAIN, a prisoner sent from Baltimore county to this county for trial. He is about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, has a dark complexion, and black hair, and is very loquacious. He has with him a variety of clothing. Said Chamberlain is well known in Baltimore, and was not long since released from the penitentiary. Benjamin Gaither, Sheriff. Oct. 25.

Central Tavern.

The subscriber informs his friends and the public generally, that he carries on the Central Tavern, formerly kept by Capt. Thomas, and lately by her deceased husband, where boarders and travellers will receive the most unremitted attention, and the best of every thing which the seasons afford. Gentlemen attending at members of the legislature, and the public in general, will find it to their advantage to give him a call, as she pledges herself nothing will be left undone to render general satisfaction to her customers. The best liquors, and fare of every kind that can be procured; shall be offered to her customers, and the greatest attention and care taken of their horses. She therefore solicits a share of public patronage. Priscilla Daley. Oct. 25.

Valuable Land for Sale.

By virtue of a decree of the court of chancery, I will sell at public sale, on the premises, on Wednesday the 13th day of November next, at 12 o'clock, A.M. if fair, if not the first fair day thereafter, all that tract of land lying in Anne Arundel county, called Holloway or Oliver's Preservation, late the property of William Conner, deceased, containing by a late survey 159 1/2 acres. The land is surrounded by two creeks, except a small part where it joins the arm of John C. Weems, and extends from there in a narrow slip to opposite to Tracey's Landing, rendering the expense of fencing very inconsiderable. The land is perfectly level, and the whole of it cleared and arable; the soil very fertile and well adapted to the growth of wheat, tobacco and the other productions of this state. The improvements are, two dwelling houses, a tobacco house, and an apple orchard, and the situation equal to any in the state for fishing, fowling, &c. the neighbouring waters affording the first oysters. The terms of sale are, a credit of two years, the purchaser giving bond with good security for the payment of the purchase money; and upon the payment of the whole purchase money a deed will be executed. If the highest bidder should not give bond with good security for the payment of the purchase money on the day succeeding the sale, the next highest bidder will be considered the purchaser. Nicholas Brewer, Jr. Trustee. Oct. 25.
