From the Harford, Con. Farmers Almanac, NOVEMBER.

As soon as the produce of your orchard and field is secured, and your farming utensils are carefully housed, put your house and barn in posture of defence against the storms of winter. It is the part of a prudent man to render the ex ecution of his business easy by judicious plans, and to save by his are what he earns by his industry.

Every economical farmer will have a Tool-House. This may be ttached to the barn, or to the cownouse, or wood-house, or stand singy, as local circumstances may rener most convenient. The observ ng farmer, while travelling through he country will be surprised to see so few buildings of this kind. When he sees a plough or a harrow frozen into the ground and standing in the open field; a cart or wagon in the ighway half covered with snow rifts; scythes and hoes hanging in an appletree or on a fence through ne winter; sleds and sleighs on the ground in the barn yard, with a lentiful growth of weeds under and about them through the summer he will be very apt to say, this nan must be rich or he could not afford all this waste. The tools and inplements of the farmer are, from the nature of his occupation, much exposed to injury by the weather, cessarily; but a neglect to house nd protect them when not in imnediate use, shews a great want of prudence and economy. The ex-pense of such a building is compa ratively small; while the convenience, comfort and real savings are considerable. It is is a kind of rendezvous-a rallying point. It has an effect to prevent your tools from being mislaid, scattered and lost. It also serves you for a workshop, which no farmer can well do without-where, in a rainy day you may mortice your posts, repair your cart, ladders, sleds, ploughs, harrows. yokes, harness, rakes & other things; grind up your axes, scythes, &c .-By the bye, never fail to keep here a good grindstone, and in good order for your neighbour's use as well s your own, and furnish a boy to turn for them occasionally, but especially when grinding up a new axe or a new scythe-it will be cheaper, you may be assured, than go abroad to do all your grind-

Horatio Gates Cilley, Esq. of Deerfield, who obtained the first ind second premiums on Indian Corn in this county, we learn, raised from one piece, measuring three icres and one hundred and sixteen square rods, 376 bushels. This probably exceeds in quantity any on traised in New England. The land was broken up from the sward in he summer of 1820, and was prepared in the following manner last spring: twenty loads of common winter straw manure to the acre vere spread, ploughed in very deep, nd the ground was harrowed af erwards ten loads of fine manure o the acre were spread, planghed n nearer to the surface, and the land was again harrowed. Chains were hen drawn each way at the discause ance of two and a malf tee; as a park for the place of teach hill, and our kernels planted. The the first that oeing, three stalks only were left n the hill—and at the second hoen from the field. By this time the round was so much burthened with negrowing corn, that it could not again hoed .- [Concord Patriot
