MISCELLANEOUS.
MASSILLON.
This distinguished preacher raised himself by his talents from a state of obscurity, to be the high ornament of the age in which he lived, both for eloquence and piety. His most celebrated sermon that on the small number of the elect, which occasioned many of his disciples to rise from their seats, struck with the horror of not being of the number. The following is a few of the most striking passages of this admirable discourse.
[Saturday Mag.]

"If you know to what obligations the title of Christian, which you bear, binds you; if you understand the holiness of your state; how much it prescribes to you a faithful, a continual vigilance, precaution against the temptations of sensual gratifications; in a word, conformity to Jesus Christ crucified; if you could comprehend it; if you could consider, that before loving God with all your heart and all your strength, a single desire which does not relate to him would defile you; if you could comprehend this, you would find yourself a monster before his eyes. What would you say of obligations so holy, and manners so profane? a vigilance so continual, and a life so careless and dissipated? a love of God so pure, so full, so universal, and a heart always a prey to a thousand affections, either strange or criminal? If it be thus, O my God! who can then be saved? Few people, my dear audience; it will not be you, unless you are changed; it will not be those who resemble you; it will not be the multitude.

"Who then can be saved? Do you wish to know? It will be those who work out their salvation with fear; who live amidst the world, but who live not as the world.
"Who can be saved? That Christian woman, who, confined to the circle of her domestic affairs, educates her children in faith and piety, leaving to the Almighty the decision of their destiny; who is adorned with chastity and modesty; who does not sit in the assembly of the vain; who does not make for herself a law of the foolish customs of the world, but corrects those customs by the law of God, and gives credit to virtue by her rank and example.
"Who can be saved? That faithful man, who, in these degenerate days, imitates the manners of the primitive Christians, whose hands are innocent and body pure; that vigilant man, who has not received his soul in vain, but who, even amidst the dangers of high life, continually applies himself to purity; that just man who does not use deception towards his neighbour, and who owes not to doubtful means the innocent increase of his fortune; that generous man who loads with benefits the enemy who wishes to destroy him, and injures not his rivals, except by superior merit; that sincere man who does not sacrifice truth to a contemptible interest, and who knows not how to please in betraying his conscience; that charitable man who makes of his house and credit the asylum of his brethren, and of his person the consolation of the afflicted; that man who uses his wealth for the benefit of the poor; who is submissive in afflictions, a Christian in injuries, penitent even in prosperity.
"Who can be saved? You, my dear hearers, if you will follow these examples. Behold! these are the people who will be saved; but these certainly do not constitute the greatest number.
"There is perhaps no person here, who cannot say to himself, 'I live as the majority, as those of my rank; of my age, and of my condition.' I am lost if I die in this state. But what is more calculated to frighten a soul, to whom there remains still something to be done for its salvation. Nevertheless, it is the multitude who tremble not,

Only a small work of fear: all the rest of mankind himself the multitude ed from his puts himself rical except ably for his account the you, my Brsembled, rest of men alone were hold the t and terrify is your last of the uni are going to Jesus Christ in the mid that you a expect him nals, to wh nounce a decree of is in vain f selves, tha than you a designs of now, will of death; i ages: every find new it haps an a than that r render on you would judge you can side what from this your-and with horro point my tating mys which I w ask you, th appear in of this as in the wo judging u just disc good and that the here asse the right number believe I even ten mighty ce five popu of you; y I am igno alone, O who bled know not we know not before the Titles a counted a privied of Who are do not w more their co who are gain into ber, who of conv proved. of sinnet for they on that y "App you?
