THE VIOLET. BY JAMES G. PRECIVAL.

Among all the sweet blooming flowers of the spring, That deck every meadow, and scent every vale, There is none to my heart such a transport can bring As the violet that blossoms unseen in the vale.

The rose may delight with its odours and blushes; We may hang on the lily's leaves tender and pale; Hues of beauty may grow on the laurel's gay bushes; But lovelier the violet that blooms in the vale.

Though the earliest dawn of the morning should find me Inhaling the fragrance that breathes in the gale, I would leave all the flowers of the garden behind me, To view the sweet violet that blooms in the vale.

When the fields are one flower bed, all blooming and gay, And far floating clouds of aroma exhale; Still no hues in the sun-beams so pleasingly play As those on the violet that blooms in the vale.

I have seen many beauties in woman's soft form, In the cheek gay with hope, or with sorrow all pale; But none could my heart so delightfully charm, As the maiden that blooms in obscurity's vale.

At the accent of joy, oh! how bright was her eye; How she wept when she listen'd to pity's soft tale; From every gay beauty of fashion I'd fly To the maiden who bloom'd in obscurity's vale.

WOMAN. Ye are stars of the night, ye are gems of the morn, Ye are dew drops whose lustre illumines the thorn, And rayless that night is, that morning unblest, When no beam in your eye lights up peace in the breast, And the sharp thorn of sorrow sinks deep in the heart, Till the sweet lip of woman assumes the smart.

'Tis her's o'er the couch of misfortune to bend, In fondness a lover—in firmness a friend, And prosperity's hour, if ever content, From woman receives both refinement and zest, Adorn'd by the bays, or enwreath'd by the willow, Her smile is our meed, and her bosom our pillow.

From the New York Statesman. GOD SAID, "LET THERE BE LIGHT," "Let there be light!" Jehovah said, And nature sprang to birth; Darkness before his presence fled, And beauty crown'd the earth.

Man, by his word, from dust he formed, And woman from his side; Their souls with fire ethereal warm'd, To heaven's dread King allied.

But soon the gloom of sin o'erspread The lustre of the mind; No light the lamp of Reason shed, And man again was blind.

His walk was darkness, and despair Upon his spirit preyed; Weary and worn with carking care, Along life's waste he strayed.

'Tis Eternal saw;—"Let there be light!" Again in heaven was heard; And, lo! man's weak bewildered sight The Star of Bethlehem cheer'd.

The Sun of Righteousness, his beam Upon the spirit shed; The sleep of sin, and error's dream, Were o'er, when Jesus bled!

THE HUMBLE PREACHER THE MOST USEFUL.

A very pious man being ordained minister of a Fishers, some of his people left hearing him, and went to other churches, in the neighbourhood. He one day meeting some of them, asked them whether they were gone. They replied they were going to hear such a one of his brethren, as his own sermons did not edify them so much. He said, where your souls get most edification, and my God's blessing and mine go with you. The people were so affected, that they related rather to trust their edification with a Lord than desert the ministry of such a holy and humble man. His gift of prayer was very excellent, though his sermons did not bear every marks of strong intellect; his success however, in winning souls to Christ, and building them up in him, was great. Some of his brethren, one day expressing their wonder how his ministrations did so much good, while theirs did so little, another answered, "That his brother, living under a deep sense of his weakness, by the aid of fervent prayer, brings all that he is warm from the heart of God, through the strength of his brethren; whereas we, being conscious of our abilities, depend on them, and consequently our sermons do not give so little edification to them."
