The University of Maryland.
ST. JOHN'S
AND
WASHINGTON
COLLEGES.

The reputation and welfare of Maryland have been deeply afflicted by the fall of this University; and although it is the common duty of every man in the state to endeavour to re-construct it, there seems to be something more than an ordinary obligation upon those, who claim to be the Alumni of the Institution, to co-operate, and to make one vigorous, united effort, to re-constitute and to restore it to its ancient usefulness and fame; that they may be the special means of transmitting to their descendants, and to posterity generally, the benefits of an Institution which the wisdom of their forefathers had created for them.
It is therefore respectfully suggested to the Alumni of this University, wherever residing, to hold a meeting on the first Friday in December next, at St. John's College in Annapolis, (by permission of the Visitors and Governors,) to take into consideration the practicability of reviving this University, the plan, and the ways and means necessary to effect it.
As the Chancellor of the state is upon the spot, and is always one of the Visitors & Governors of the University, it is also suggested that he be invited to attend as President of the Convention.
Should this proposition meet with the approbation of those to whom it is directed, it may be useful to insert short paragraphs in the several newspapers of the state, and of the District of Columbia, favourable to the plan, and urging a general attendance at the Convention—as it is not only desirable that our once distinguished and venerable "Alma Mater" should be re-animated and restored by her Sons, but particularly so that they should form a Brotherhood of every surviving member of the family to undertake the noble work, to which gratitude and duty equally invite.
ALUMNUS.
P. S. The Editors of newspapers throughout the state, and in the District of Columbia, are requested to give this publication a few insertions in their respective Journals.

SAD THOUGHTS.
Go, idler, tempt me not—my years,
In spite of mirth, will flow,
That mirth to musing grief appears—
Like madness—Idler go.
There is a time for revelling,
Beside the dark dark hour,
When midnight slaps her raven wing
O'er sorrow's gleamy bowler.
There is a place for pleasure's tread,
Remote from haunts like mine,
Where mirth may fill the giddy head
That beauty's wreaths entwine.
But let the viol cease to play
That has the dance inspir'd—
It vainly bids my heart be gay,
My weary limbs untir'd.
I would not change the reverie
Of midnight sighs and tears,
For pleasure's halcyon song of glee
That charm'd my younger years.
There's joy in music, bliss in smiles,
And happiness in love,
But solitude the heart beguiles
To extasy above.
I'd rather hear a heavenly lyre,
An angel's smile obtain,
An angel's breast with friendship fire,
Than taste such glee again.
And haply o'er my lone retreat,
In fondness hov'ring near,
Some seraph bosom now may beat
With joy to find me here.
O could I clasp that sinless form,
And drink that seraph's breath,
Gladly my heart would meet the storm,
That yields the sufferer death.

From a volume entitled, "Poems of Youth, by a Family Circle," supposed to be the productions of Mr. Roscoe's family, Liverpool.
I'll be a fairy, and drink the dew,
And creep through the hooped flowers,
And sleep in the violet tender blue,
And dance in the evening hours.
My music shall be the soft low gales
Which sigh through the dark green trees,
And heaven's breath swell the gossamer sails
With which I swim the breeze.
The glow-worm shall be my gentle light,
And a lily's cup my bed;
And I'll warm me in the sweet moon light,
And on fallen roses tread.
And ever fresh the grass shall grow
Around my mystic ring,
And little murmurs, sweet and low,
Shall answer when I sing.
And I will hold a fairy court,
And call each lumbering fay,
And wild and shadly will we sport,
As the twilight fades away.
I'll be a fairy, and drink the dew,
And creep through the hooped flowers,
And sleep on the violet tender blue,
And dance in the evening hours.

For the Maryland Gazette.
AN ADVENTURE IN KENTUCKY.
From the Manuscript volume of a
Tour through the United States.
It was a delightful evening in May 1820, when, on my tour thro' the western country, I got to the banks of the head waters of the Licking. The rain which had been descending in torrents for several days before, had swelled the river to such a degree, that to cross it either by ford or in a boat, had become absolutely impossible; so there was nothing left me, but to turn my horse and try to gain some house, where I might claim the hospitality of its inmates till the morning, for by that time it was supposed the flood would have subsided. I accordingly retraced the path which had conducted me to the river, and soon found myself on a considerable elevation, whence I had a view of the country for some distance around. The moon stood high in the heavens, and the broad sheets of her silvery light, resting on the forest-covered breasts of the distant hills, formed a lovely contrast to the deeper hues of the shaded valleys, whence the rolling and swelling of the water ascended in confused and indistinct sound. A clump of Lombardy poplars, reaching at a short distance, their gracefully waving heads, into the nocturnal sky, indicated some dwelling near; and I slipped my course towards them. A path winding on the side of a hill through an underwood of low pine and chestnut, soon brought me to the many gates of an inclosure of iron rails, which was raised on a low foundation of stones, and studded at intervals by many quadrangular pillars. This gate opened into an avenue of aged oaks, that spread their knarled foliage-covered branches across the sombre way, and an eternal silence seemed to have taken possession of the
