ON THE LILY OF THE VALLEY.

Fair modest flower that shuns parade, Whose sweets to other sweets excel, Oh have I sought thee in the shade, And watch'd thy slowly opening bell. In life's fair morn, when I was blest, And sigh'd like thee to love and gay— Pale flower! I pluck'd thee near my breast, And threw the blushing rose away. Yet 'twas not hatred that did guide My inwaid choice, and more my scorn; My heart the rose was swoln with pride, And thou neglected and forlorn. May pity ever thus prevail, And sofly all my soul incline, To listen to the plaintive tale, And make the cause of sorrow mine. And when I see mistfortune sink, 'Neath cruel pride's sarcastic rail, I'll raise its drooping head, and think On thee, sweet lily of the vale.

ODE TO MEMORY.

"Man giveth up the Ghost and where is he?" And where is he? Not by the side Whose every want he lov'd to tend; Not o'er those walls wandering wide, Where sweetly lost he oft would mend; That form below'd he marks no more, Those scenes admird he no more shall see, Those scenes are lovely as before, And she as fair—but where is he? Not, no, the radiance is not dim, That used to gild his favourite hill, The pleasures that were dear to him, Are dead to life and nature still; But, ah! his home is not as fair, Neglected must his garden be, The lilies droop and wither there, And seem to whisper, "where is he?" His was the pomp—the crowded hall, But where is now the proud display! His riches, honour, pleasures all Desire courts from the scene where are they! And he, as some tall rock that stands Protected by the circling sea, Surrounded by admiring bands, Seem'd proudly strong—and where is he? The church-yard bears an added stone— The fire-side shows a vacant chair; Here sadness dwells and weeps alone, And death displays his banners there; The life is gone—the breath has fled, And what has been no more shall be; The well known form—the welcome tread— Oh! where are they, and where is he?

THE CHURCH YARD.

You have sauntered, perhaps, of a moon-light evening, out of the precincts of the living and moving world, to linger and contemplate among the grass-grown memorials of those who are gone—"The body to its place, and the soul to Heaven," and the rest in God's own time." An appalling chill shoots through the current of life as the undisturbed and tranquilly shining on the white marble, and feebly illuminating the name which friendship had carved for the slumberer beneath—here the grass waving in rank luxuriance, as if to hide the triumphs and the trophies of death—and there a human bone unearthed from its timeworn sepulchre, a ghastly visiter to the realms of day—a wooden tablet marking the repose of the humble—another, the sign of the sleeping believer—and lofty and magnificent memorials over the relics of the wealthy and the great. Ah! who, in such an assemblage, can be the accounted great?—What gold survives the crucible of death? We can learn nothing from the living which the dead do not teach us. Would Beauty be modest and unpretending, let her quit her toilet to the tomb. Would the proud learn humility—the resentful good nature—the penurious charity—the bigoted philanthropy, would the scholar ascertain the true objects of knowledge—the man of the world the true means of happiness here and hereafter—and the ambitious the true sources of greatness—let him retire awhile from the living, and commune with the dead. We must all come to the mournful silent level of the grave. Our bones must mingle in one common mass. Our affections should terminate in one fearful issue—Life is full of facilities of virtue and of happiness; and when you purrle affection, and humble your pride, and elevate your hopes at the tomb of a friend, when the stars are shining on it, like the glorious beams of religion on the mansion of death. [Charleston Courier.]

EXTRACT.

Consider, would it not wound thee to this heart, to come upon thy death-bed, and instead of having the comfort of a well spent life, and the merits of the Lord Jesus Christ, together with the comfort of his glorious spirit, to have first the sight of an ill spent life, thy sins flying in thy face, thy conscience uttering of itself, with thunder-claps against thee, the thoughts of God terrifying of thee, death, with his merciless paw, seizing upon thee, the delirious ready to scramble for thy soul, still enlarging herself, and ready to swallow thee up, an eternity of misery and torment standing upon thee, from which there will be no relief. For, mark! death doth not come alone, it is accompanied with such such company, as will not but sensitize of it, it would make thee tremble.

The University of Maryland, ST. JOHN'S AND WASHINGTON COLLEGES. The reputation and welfare of Maryland have been deeply affected by the fall of this University, and although it is the common duty of every man in the State to endeavor for its reconstruction, there seems to be something more than an ordinary obligation upon those who claim to be the Alumni of the Institution, to co-operate, and to make one vigorous, united effort, to re-constitute and to restore to its ancient splendor and fame that they may be the special means of transmitting to their descendants, and to posterity generally, the benefits of an institution which the wisdom of their forefathers had created for them.

It is therefore respectfully suggested to the Alumni of this University, wherever residing, to hold a meeting on the first Friday in December next, at St. John's College in Annapolis, (by permission of the Visitors and Governors,) to take into consideration the practicability of reviving this University, the plan, and the ways and means necessary to effect it.

Should this proposition meet with the approbation of those to whom it is directed, it may be useful to insert short paragraphs in the several newspapers of the State, and of the District of Columbia, favourable to the plan, and urging a general attendance at the Convention—as it is not only desirable that our once distinguished and venerable "Alma Mater" should be re-animated and restored by her Sons, but particularly so that they should form a Brotherhood of every surviving member of the family to undertake the noble work, to which gratitude and duty, equally invite.

ALUMNUS. P. S. The Editors of newspapers throughout the State, and in the District of Columbia, are requested to give this publication a few insertions in their respective Journals.
