The University of Maryland.
ST. JOHN'S
AND WASHINGTON
COLLEGES.

The reputation and welfare of Maryland have been deeply afflicted by the fall of this University; and although it is the common duty of every man in this state to endeavour to re-construct it, there seems to be something more than an ordinary obligation upon those, who claim to be the Alumni of the Institution, to co-operate, and to make one vigorous, united effort, to resuscitate and to restore it to its ancient usefulness and fame, that they may by the special means of transmitting to their descendants, and to posterity generally, the benefits of an Institution which the wisdom of their forefathers had created for them.

It is therefore respectfully suggested to the Alumni of this University, wherever residing, to hold a meeting on the first Friday in December next, at St. John's College in Annapolis, (by permission of the Visitors and Governors), to take into consideration the practicability of reviving this University, the plan, and the ways and means necessary to effect it.

As the Chancellor of the state is upon the spot, and is always one of the Visitors & Governors of the University, it is also suggested that he be invited to attend as President of the Convention. Should this proposition meet with the approbation of those to whom it is directed, it may be useful to insert short paragraphs in the several newspapers of the state, and of the District of Columbia, favourable to the plan, and urging a general attendance at the Convention—as it is not only desirable that our once distinguished and venerable "Alma Mater," should be re-animated and restored by her Sons, but particularly so that they should form a Brotherhood of every surviving member of the family to undertake the noble work, to which gratitude and duty equally invite.

ALUMNUS.
P. S. The Editors of newspapers throughout the state, and in the District of Columbia, are requested to give this publication a few insertions in their respective Journals.

MISCELLANEOUS
THE LATE GENERAL Z. M. PIKE.
From the Charleston Courier.
There is a charm in footing slow,
Across a silent plain;
Where patriot battle has been fought,
Where glory had the gain;
There is a pleasure on the heath,
Where druids old have been,
Where mantles grey have rusted by,
And swept the nettles green. — [Keats.
It is not only soothing, but it is animating, to recall to mind the actions of the virtuous, the wise, the generous and the brave, that are departed. The recollection of their example not only imparts to our bosoms a tenderness of feeling approximating to the sublime, but also excites in our hearts the glowing fires of the spirit of emulation.
To mourn the death of such men is to indulge a godlike sorrow; to weep when their graves are not unmanly. Such are the reflections that arise in our mind, on a perusal of the following extract, that, in Grimshaw's History of the United States, closes a sketch of the military character of the lamented late Gen. Pike.
"Meanwhile, the heroic Pike, as humane as he was brave, occupied himself in removing a wounded British soldier from a place of danger; and after having performed this act of generosity, was calmly seated on the stump of a tree, in conversation with another soldier who had been taken prisoner, when suddenly the air was convulsed by a dreadful explosion. The British magazine, at the distance of 200 yards, near the barracks had blown up; huge stones and fragments of wood were rent asunder, and the exploding of 500 barrels of gun-powder, immense quantities of the fire in the midst of the victorious column, killing and wounding upwards of two hundred, and among the latter General Pike. But the Americans, though for a moment confounded, soon recovered their former order; the ranks were instantly closed, and their undaunted spirit was evinced by their loud huzzas! The wound of the gallant Pike was soon found to be mortal; yet he still retained the fire and solicitude of the soldier and commander—'Move on my brave boys,' he exclaimed, 'and revenge your general!' They instantly obeyed. He was then carried on board a vessel, and shortly afterwards gratified by the sight of the British flag. On seeing the victorious trophy, his eyes, over which approaching death had already drawn the prophetic film, for a moment resumed their lustre, and making signs for it to be placed under his head he calmly expired."
If we know aught of the supremacy of soul, it was manifest in the dying moments of that heroic patriot and soldier.

TRIBUTE
To the memory of the late General Zebulon Montgomery Pike, who, in the defence of liberty & his country, before the town of York, in Upper Canada, fell gloriously in the arms of victory, on the 27th of April, 1813.
"The narrow house shall receive me in the midst of the light of reason. — [Ossian.
Silent now is the battle ground,
Where fought the bold, where fell the brave;
Gone is the trumpet's martial sound,
But see, oh, see the soldier's grave!
Still 'tis the "spirit-stirring drum,"
No longer here our banners wave;
But here we find the warrior's home,
For see! oh, see the soldier's grave!
Awake my harp! awake the song,
For him who fell among the brave,
For him who sleeps these shades among,
Cold, cold within a soldier's grave!
Where is the heart, by valour led
To bleed, our liberties to save?
It rests, embalmed with sweets, that shed
A fragrance on the volder's grave.
Let virgin hands an offering bring,
And round his couch the cypress weave;
And strewn with freshest flowers of spring,
The mound that marks the soldier's grave.
Methinks I hear a footstep's tread!
How lightly, where you warriors wavel
As if by silence it were led—
The spirit of the soldier's grave.
My harp! rebound the requiem song,
For him who fell among the brave;
For him, who sleeps these shades among,
His resting place the soldier's grave.

GO, LET ME WEEP.
Go, let me weep there's bliss in tears,
When he who sheds them, sorrowfully feels
Some lingering stain of early years.
Efficacy by every drop that steals.
The fruitless showers of worldly woe
Fall dark to earth, and never rise.
While tears that from repentance flow,
In bright exhalation reach the skies.
Go, let me weep there's bliss in tears,
When he who sheds them, sorrowfully feels
Some lingering stain of early years.
Efficacy by every drop that steals.
