

Annapolis, Thursday, Sept. 19.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The Editor wishes to improve the appearance of the Gazette, and make it a more valuable publication, contemplating enlarging it to an imperial size. This undertaking will be attended with considerable expense, and to effect it the aid of his subscribers and advertising friends is indispensable.

FLATTERING.

At a late meeting in England of the Plymouth Agricultural Society, the premium for the best Pough was awarded for one made in Connecticut. The gentlemen who examined it pronounced it superior to every other invention of the kind.

REVENUE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

It is stated that the receipts from the treasury of Pennsylvania for the last six months, exceed $310,000.

PENSACOLA.

Accounts from Pensacola up to the 7th August state, that 7 or 8 cases of yellow fever had occurred. Precautionary steps had been taken by the board of health to prevent its extension.

From the New-York Statesman.

"LOVE HAS EYES." The Westchester Herald states, that a villain of the name of Wm. Rosier, was detected in robbing the store of Michael Marks, by a young lady and gentleman, who, as the term goes, were keeping company in the house directly opposite to the scene of burglary.

BENEFIT OF CLERGY.

A most remarkable and unprecedented instance of this clerical immunity from punishment being twice prayed for a culprit occurred this day. As will be seen by the following report, a jury were twice sworn, in the same case—first, to try the prisoner on the indictment; and secondly, to try whether the identical prisoner had or had not already taken the benefit of clergy.

William Smith, aged 20, was convicted of stealing a shirt, and other articles of wearing apparel, the property of John Keane. When called up for judgment, he knelt down in the usual way, and prayed the benefit of clergy.

THE KING AND QUEEN went abroad in the morning for the first time on the 19th, escorted by a national militia. The King and Queen went abroad in the morning for the first time on the 19th, escorted by a national militia.

NIGHTS OF LAWS.

At our late Sessions, Daniel Cox, and Joseph Francis, were charged with stealing a watch, but the watch proved to be a drake, they were acquitted.

From the Philadelphia Union. Is there a heart that never lov'd? Horace and Virgil, two boot blacks, who, with the names of the two famous Latin bards, inherit a portion of the poetic description, were yesterday, with their wives, brought before one of our Aldermen, accused of disturbing the peace of the neighborhood.

These two coloured gentlemen, some time since, fixed their affections on two sisters, Phillis and Flora, and in due time each led his own fair to the altar, where the Right Rev. Mr. — united them for life. All was love and harmony during the season of court ship; but oh!

"The time arrives, the dangerous time, When all those virtues opening now no fair, Transplanted to the world's tempestuous climate, Must learn each passion's boisterous breath to bear."

Horace, finding it harder to support two than one, soon became tired of his new barthen.—He however concealed the cause of his dissatisfaction from his wife, till she one day very plainly told him that she would skiver him alive, if he did not reveal the secret of his ill humour. He to tantalize her, replied, that it was her sister he wanted, and not her, and that with her he never could live in peace.

The magistrate ordered them to pay the costs; and go home and settle the matter among themselves, advising each of them to rest content with his own wife.

From the Same.

"I lov'd you for your cupboard dear, I lov'd you for your cash.—Old Song. One day last week, a handsome young widow went before a magistrate, and accused a certain gentleman of various and manifold misdemeanors. Women are always eloquent when in love or in affliction: we shall suffer her to tell her own story.

"If your honour will allow me, I'll begin with the day I first saw this man, and tell you all the circumstances. Six months ago, Sir, (two months after my poor dear husband died,) he came to my house and took board. He had then just arrived from Connecticut, from which place he brought neither frunks, books, money, nor politeness. His hat contained his ward robe, (one shirt,) his pocket his library, (one, old spelling-book,) his purse, six brass farthings, (all the rest of his brass was in his face): his politeness was, nobody knew where. Such were his hopes and his accomplishments; yet I allowed him to have board, expecting to be paid from the profits of a school which he said he meant to establish; but he soon gave up his notion of school keeping; for that of love making, and began to practice his wiles on my too susceptible heart. He said that his father was a rich man, but that he had quarrelled with him on account of a girl whom he wished to marry, contrary to his inclinations, which induced him to leave home. His story was plausible, and I carnally acknowledged, that all at once, he gained my affections; and after he had secured my heart, he handled my cash till he was master of all I possessed. Every day new coats were coming from the tailors, new shirts from the seamstresses, new hats from the hatters, new stockings from the dry goods store—all were paid for by me, and I was to have himself and his fortune in return for every thing he wanted money, he swore I was to be his wife, and that he would marry me as soon as himself and his father were reconciled. He went on in this way till he left me without a cent, and coming to me the other day for 20 dollars, abused me because I had not to give him, and said that he would never marry me, as I was false as I was fair. I told him, with tears in my eyes, that I had no money, or he should have it.—He then fell into a violent rage, broke my looking-glass, thimbles, and tea-pot, and swore that I wanted to deceive him. This was his return for all my kindness: I then said, that if he would pay me all he owed for money borrowed here for board, he might go where he pleased. He answered, that he had paid me in kisses on my old lips, more than all was worth; and, God knows, I would rather have one dollar than all his kisses, for he has left me nothing but a broken heart—he has eaten me out of house and home." Bursting into tears, she sat down to weep.

The gentleman then arose in a violent passion! He could not bear to hear himself defamed in such a manner. Every word of the accusation was false. He only wished she was a man, then he would know how to seek redress.

Somehow or other, however, his colour changed, and his courage seemed to abate, when a man did actually step up to him, declare himself the friend of the lady, attest the truth of her declarations, and offer him any kind of redress, he should choose to demand. "I have nothing to do with you, Sir," said the gentleman, "I was bred a lawyer, and not a duellist: by the one avocation I can support life; by the other, I should lose it."

The magistrate told the widow, that the proper way for her to obtain redress, was to bring an action at law; but if she chose, she could then sue for the amount of her bill. This was accordingly done, and the gentleman, not being able to procure bail, was provided with lodgings in Arch-st. some way beyond Broad.

POSTSCRIPT.

DEATHS in Baltimore and Philadelphia. The number of interments in the city of Baltimore for the week ending on Monday morning last, is stated in the report of the Board of Health to have been 91.

The number of interments in the city and liberties of Philadelphia for the last week was 93.

THE FEVER AT NEW YORK.

No abatement of the fever appears to have taken place in New York as late as Sunday last. On that day eight new cases were reported.

GENERAL JACKSON'S PROSPECTS.

A New Orleans paper of the 15th August, states that General Jackson will receive all the votes of Louisiana, for President of the U. S. in addition to those of Tennessee. It is likewise stated, he will be supported by South Carolina, his native state, Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama. If Kentucky and Ohio should be thrown into the scale, he will certainly become a very formidable candidate.

GENERAL JACKSON.

An Alabama paper, after allowing to Gen. Jackson great military merit, and expressing doubts of his qualifications for a civil office concludes with a wish that if he be made President he will hang every scoundrel in Washington within five minutes after his inauguration.

EDWARD COLES.

Formerly of Virginia, is elected Governor of the state of Illinois. N. Intell.

ANOTHER MASSACRE AT SCIO.

Extract of a letter from an American gentleman to his friend in Washington, "Smyrna, 24th June, 1822. There was a final massacre of the Greeks of Scio on Thursday last, 4 or 5000, in consequence of the Greek fleet having sent a fire ship among the Turks, and succeeded in blowing up one of their new Frigates with the Captain Pasha and 2000 men."

THE FUR TRADE.

Since the abolition of the United States Fur-trade, a great activity has prevailed in the operation of this trade. Those formerly engaged in it have increased their capital and extended their enterprise; and many new firms have engaged in it, and others are preparing to do so. It is computed that a thousand men, chiefly from this place, are now employed in this trade on the waters of the Missouri, and half that number on the Upper Mississippi. The Missouri Fur Company, which alone employs upwards of 300 men, have reached the mountains, and will soon be on the Columbia river. Others have the same destination, so that the rich furs of that region will soon cease to be the exclusive property of the Hudson Bay Company.

Besides furs, the Rocky Mountains may produce something else to reward the enterprise of those who penetrate their recesses. They are a continuation of the Andes, which stretch through South America and Mexico, and abound wherever they are reached with various minerals, precious stones, and gold and silver. The Rocky Mountains were called the Shining Mountains by the early travellers, from their glittering appearance in the sun, occasioned by the peculiar brilliancy of the many stones which are found upon them. A hunter pursuing his game found the silver mine of Potosi, and many others have been discovered by the like accidents, and there is no reason to suppose that others are unobtainable, feries may not yet be made at St. Louis, Ozark

The American brig, Jess Mine, Captain Green, of New York, with 600 barrels of lead and 100 barrels of iron, on her deck, on the 11th July, by the British cutter, Fish of Wales, Capt. Oliver, was carried into Greenock.

The Harrisburgh Pa. Chronicle of the 9th inst, says they have had but one shower since the 10th July. O'backwards and turnip they expect scarcely any more crops of potatoes and corn. Notwithstanding the excessive drought in many parts of the state, it is, says the Chronicle, remarkable that the Susquehanna is not so low by three-fourths towards the head waters of this river as its tributary streams.

LARGE MELON.

A water-melon, weighing thirty four pounds, and measuring three feet four inches in circumference, was lately raised by Mr. Joseph Hall of Albany.

OBITUARY.
