About the beginning of the last century, the curate of Slagarh, in the Swedish province of Schonen, and several of his parishioners, digging turf in a drained marshy soil, found some feet below the surface of the ground, an entire cart with the skele-tons of the horses and carter. It is probable that there had once been a lake or pond on that spot, and the carter had perished in attempting to cross over upon the ice. By the falling down of a piece of the, liff, on Walton shore, near Harwich the skeleton of an enormous animal was discovered, measuring nearly 30 feet in length: Some of the bunes were nearly as large as a man's body, and six or seven feet long; the cavities which contained the marrow were large enough to admit the introduction of a man's arm. The bones on being handled broke to pieces. One of the molar teeth was carried to Colchester. It weighs seven pounds, is of a square form. and grinding surface; it is studded with several zigzag rows of Laminæ, which seem to denote that it belonged to a carniverous animal. There were more teeth, which were unfortunately broken, one of which weighed 12 pounds. It is probable that the tusks will be found, by searching further into the cliff, or amongst the earth which has fallen down. The above skeleton is supposed to belong to an animal of the same species as that called the Mammoth, the remains of which have been found in North America, Great Tartary. &c. vestigation, as to our conduct during

A petrifaction so curious, was immediately deposited in the Museum of Natural History.

From the Nautucket Inquirer. THE WHALE FISHERY.

Nantucket, Jan. 14. Abstract of two letters from the Collector of New-Bedford to the Hon. Mr. Baylies, relative to the whale fishery.

"In January, 1822, it is stated that the number of vessels employey in this fishery, from the port of New-Bedford, was 68-tonage 16, 222-navigated by 1350 men and boys. Those employed exclusively in the spermaceti whale fishery, were 36—tonage 9945—navigated by about 800 men. The oil and bore brought from the Pacific Ocean to New-Bedford, since the last war (to Jan. 1822) are estimated at $1.713, 600. Annual value to New-Bedford, of the fishery in the Pacific, $500,000, exclusive of the profits arising from the manufacture of spermaceti candles. The capital employed is rated at $850,000, the tills of some of the ships being as high as 52 or $33,000, each?

"The annual value of the spermaceti whale fishery to 'Nantucket and New Bedford together, is estimated at $1,500,000. The oil and bone brought into both places be-tween the termination of the last war, and Jan. 5, 1822, is stated to have exceeded $6,000,000 and the humber of seamen employed therefrom amounts to 2500—this fishery giving employment also to all the mechanics of both places. BOILING SPRINGS.

Major Long, in his work, gives the following account of the Boiling Spring in the valley that leads to the highest Peak of the Rocky Mountains, in the bottom of which were found a number of Indian Ornaments, left there no doubt as sac-

The Boiling Spring is a large and beautiful fountain of water, cool and transparent, and highly ærated with carbonic acid. It rises on the brink of a small stream, which here descends from the mountain, at the point where the bed of the stream divides the ridge of sand-stone. which rests against the base of the first granitic range.

The water of the spring deposits a copious concretion of carbonate of lime, which has accumulated on every sitle, until it has formed a large basin overhanging the stream. This basin is of a snowy whiteness, and large enough to contain three or four hundred gallons, and is constantly overflowing. The spring rises from the bottom of the basin with a rumbling noise, discharging about equal volumes of air and water, probably about fifty gallons per minute, the whole being kept in constant agitation. The water is beautifully transparent, and has the sparkling appearance, the grateful taste, and the exhilirating effect of ærated antificial the most strongly mineral waters.

Distant a few rods from this, is another spring of the same kind, which discharges no water, its basin remaining constantly full, and air only escaping from it. We collected some of the air from both of these springs, in a box we had carried for the reception of plants. but could not perceive it to have the least smell, or the power of extinguishing flame, which was tested by plunging into it lighted splinters of dryece-

The temperature of the water of the larger spring at noon, was 69 deg. the thermometer at the same time, in the shade, stood at 68 deg. immersed in the small spring, at 67 deg. This difference in tempera ture is owing to the difference of situation, the higher temperature of the small spring, depending entirely on its constant exposure to the rays of the sun, and on its retaining the same portion of water, while that in the large spring is constantly replaced by a new supply.

Description of Cape Mesurada, by a gentleman who has resided there, and has a local knowledge of the country.

Cape Mesurada, the place fixed upon by the American settlers for to be now in the North Pacific. be- | mile into the sea, On the north side of the Cape runs the river Mesurada, in an easterly direction, in which tio source, the following statement are two small islands that appertain of the number of ships belonging to the colony. To the northward the H. States, at present engaged in of the Cape the land is low, as far as half Cape Mount, about twenty five hiles from Mesurada. From the summit of the Cape can be seen a number of kingdoms, for there are not many kings in the vicinity of Mesurada who can boast of having one hundred subjects. The land is productive of corn, coffee, &c. A large quantity of camwood and ivory can always be procured in a short time, consequently valuable to the settlement.

No 10.]

The situation of the town 'must be healthy, as the Cape is not high enough to attract the clouds, but it is sufficiently lofty to rarify the air. in addition to which is the regular land and sea breeze, the land breeze lasting until 12 o'clock. There are & great number of cool, fresh water springs, on and wear the Cape, which are a valuable acquisition to a colony.

The natives are a very superstitious people. They believe in their Gryons, which are sold to them by tirir doctors: they always have them about their persons; they are made of different articles, according to 581,366 the fancy of the doctor. Small pieces of horn, witha composition enclosed by the doctor, they affirm prevents death. Within fifteen miles of Cape Mesurada is the Rio St. Paul, valuable for the quantity of ivory and camwood which comes down from the country. It is said that there is a communication between the rive ers Mesurada and St. Paul, which if correct is certainly favourable to the settlement.

The anchorage in Mesurada Bay is safe, from 7 to 13 fathoms, soft bottom. On the bar, at the entrance of Mesurada River, in the channel, in the rainy season, is 22 fathomsinside of the river from 4 to 6 fathoms-rise and fall, 7 feet.

The curiosities of this place consist of but one square flat stone or rock, called by the natives the Devil's Rock, which appears to have been separated by some convulsion of the earth. It is perpendicular, and about 40 feet high; here they sacrifice a white fowl to the devil, to make slave ships arrive. They have innumerable quantities of devil's bushes, which are held sacred, and used only for sacrifices and grand palavers.

Were the society to send out agents to govern the Colony, having a local knowledge of the country, the Cape would be the most flourishing colony on the coast, in a

A SKETCH OF HUDIBRAS.

By Thomas Chinsun.

Hudibras, is the production of a man of most lively and fertile imagination, possessing unbounded powers of satire, with a genius for peculiarity of composition which has hitherto soared far above any attempt at imitation. It is a work requiring a continued exercise of the mind, which delights without fatiguing, and each successive perusal is accompanied with additional gratification arising from the playful brilliancy of new ideas coninually flashing before us.

The hero is depicted with .Butler's customary minuteness: his hypocritical pretentions to religion, his sectarian delight in noisy brawling and unprofitable controversy, his obstinate adherence to opinion however erroneous, his arrogance to his inferiors, but cringing and submissive department to these who can grant him a favour, together with a multitude of grovelling propensities, are all most happily wrought up in the composition of Hudibras, whom we should most heartily detent, was not the portrait placed in such a light, that we are almost involuntarily compelled to
