Upan a new and Improved Plan. The Editor of the Matyland Gazette, de signs making a considerable change is the plan and character of his paper. The rea-tions which induce him to adopt this mea-sure are various, and they shall be briefly stated.

et sted.

The Maryland Clasette was established in the ear 1745, by one of the ancestors of the arcestors of the arcestor, but by three other papers on this Continent, all of which it has survived to the arcestors of the steam of the continent, all of which it has survived to the arcestors are assent the uldest party of the three forces are meant the uldest party of the three forces are meant the uldest party of the continent. ents Continent, all of which it has survived. It is therefore at pussent the uldest paper in America: From the period of its establishment, until the year 1813, it preserved the same character, and the same title; anterior to this period; it was strictly a vehicle of general intelligence—it was not devoted to the reward object of any partianterfor to this period; it was strictly a vehicle of general intelligence—it was not devoted to the views and objects of any particular party, but its columns were accessible to all: Artie commencement of that year (a most montentous period in the history of odr, unity.) it was deemed necessary to give at a tiew character; and the better to designate its future course, an additional title also; it was henceforward called the Maryland Gazette and Political Intelligencer: At this peajod great political excitement prevailed, and party spirit raged with uncontroled violence—our county men were divided into two treat parties—the one approving, the other condemning the measure of the general government. Being for the by this state of things to take a part in the political contests of the day, the editor, after the mattirest deliberation, and with the fullest conviction of his under standing, resolved to advocate, exclusively, that policy which was recommended by the federal party. If he differed from a majority of his countrymen, he differed honest ly; and whether his views and sentiments were erroneous or not, they were the dic ly; and whether his views and sentiments were erroneous or not, they were the dic tates of the purest patriotism, and proceed ed from an ardent desire to promote, what he conceived to be, the best interests of his country. But these scenes have passed away —times have changed —& the situation of our the full enjoyment of almost every national blessing—we are not only exempt from the horrors of war, but we are every where blessed with plenty and abundance. Our commerce, our agriculture, and our manufactures are comparatively flourishing—lar more so perhaps than in any other quarter of the globe But above all, the demon of party specific non-life, and we true for ever; the verse of good feelings! has now, we liope, indeed arrived, when the only contest will be, who can do his country most exercise and who is no now true to office.

the only questions asked with be, Is he honest? Is he capable? Is he virtuous?" To Mr. Monroe much praise must be accorded for that state of harmony, which has for some time past pervaded our country—so wise has been the course of policy that he has pursued, that he has satisfied all parties, and letter a path in the has satisfied all parties, and letter a path in the satisfied all parties. and left us nothing to dispute about. So great then has been the change of circum stances which a few years have produced, not only in our own country, but in Eu-rope also, that the Editor deems it no longer necessary to continue his paper as the advocate of any particular political party. Its columns will henceforth be open to all who may choose to avail themselves of them. without any other restrictions than requiring decency of language, the avoiding of personalities, and correctness of composi tion. But it will be the peculiar object of the Editor to render his paper subservient to the best interests of his own state - He wishes to make it emphatically a State Paper. By this expression, he means a paper, whose previous it will be to uphold and maintain the honour and dignity of the state—to promote her prosperity by diffusing such inflammation with regard to her resources and her means of internal impacts of the property of the provement, as he may be enabled to obtain As an indication of the future character of his paper, he has given to it the new title of Viate Register. It will in future become the repository of all state documents, and of such other information as may tend to allow the history of the state. elucidate the history of the state, or proelucidate the history of the state, or promote its improvement and prosperity

It will also be the object of the Editor to present his patrons with the earliest intelligence, foreign or domestic; and he will be particularly careful to devote a due portion of his paper to the interests of Agriculture, Manufactures, and Domestic Economy.

With this statement of his objects and his viewa, the Editor submits his plan to the patronage of the public—Should it be fapatronage of the public—Should it be fa-voured with their support, he will endea-vour not to disappoint the expectation that may be excited.

If sufficient encouragement be afforded, the paper will be enlarged to an imperial size, and printed with a new type.
