150 Dollars Reward.

Ranaway on the 29th October last, from the farm of Judge Johns, on West River, a Negro fellow by the name of HARRY AYRES, about five feet seven or eight inches high; when spoken to assumes an impudent look, but when closely questioned his countenance changes to the other extreme. Had on when he absconded, a PEA COAT, and pair of yellow domestic trousers about half worn; he also took with him a suit of blue domestic, and a mixed summer coat. He is of delicate frame, and has no visible scars that are recollected. A reward of fifty dollars will be given if taken in the state, and the above reward if taken out of the state. It is probable that he may attempt to get to the state of Delaware, having a brother residing there with his master.

Valuable Real Estate FOR SALE.

By virtue of a decree of the Court of Chancery of Maryland, the subscriber will, at 12 o'clock on Thursday the 25th of November instant, (if fair, and if not, on the first fair day thereafter,) sell at public sale on the premises, to the highest bidder, the real estate of the late George Hogarth, Esq. being about 800 acres of valuable land in Anne-Arundel county, situated upon Herring Bay, about 20 miles from Annapolis, 50 from Baltimore, and adjoining the village of Friendship.

It has the advantage of an excellent landing, whence the greater part of the produce of Calvert county and of the lower parts of Anne-Arundel, is shipped for the Baltimore market, and from which, two packets run regularly twice a week. The land is of excellent quality, is well adapted to the growth of fine tobacco, grain clover, and planter is said to set upon it with great effect—it abounds with timber and timber of every description, which may be cut and conveyed to the landing with great facility by very convenient roads made at great expense with a view to that object.

The land will be sold entire, if any one or more disposed to purchase at a fair price express a wish to do so before or on the day of sale. In the meantime for the accommodation of bidders, if none should wish to buy the whole, it will be divided into three lots, two of about 300 each, and one of about 200 acres.

Lot No. 1,

Will bind immediately on Herring Bay, and contain, besides several small tenements, the following valuable improvements, viz a warehouse, dwelling house, and kitchen, contiguous to the landing at the core, on a lot which offers great advantages for a Lumber Yard—an excellent dwelling desirably situated, having six rooms on the same floor, including a very commodious kitchen, the whole surrounded by a Portico, a very large, new and substantial tobacco house of round and durable materials upwards of 70 feet long, and about 40 feet wide, including the shed; there are also one or more quarters on this lot, and other out houses in good order.

Lot No. 2,

Will have on it a small tenement of one story, which will answer for a temporary dwelling, a large, new and substantial tobacco house, in excellent preservation, and several comfortable quarters.

Lot No. 3,

Is nearly covered with valuable timber, has on it, one or more useful tenements, and immediately adjoins the town of Friendship. Both

Lots No. 1 & 2,

Have on them several extensive flats or bottoms, some of them partially cleared and improved, and all of which with little trouble or expense may be converted into excellent meadows.

The Terms of Sale are—One fourth cash on the day of sale, or of the ratification thereof by the chancellor, and the residue by equal instalments, in six, twelve and eighteen months, bearing interest from the day of sale, and to be secured by bond with good securities—and on the ratification of the sale and payment of the whole purchase money, the land is directed to be conveyed by

LEWIS NETH, Jr. Trustee.
 Nov. 4.

The editors of the National Intelligencer, American and Federal Gazette, will publish the above once a week for three weeks, and forward their accounts to this office for collection.

Chancery Sale.

By virtue of a decree of the Court of Chancery, the subscriber will expose to public sale, on the premises, on Tuesday the 23d day of November next, if fair, if not the next fair day thereafter, the farm on which Benjamin Hancock resided, lying on the Bodkin Neck, and containing two hundred and ninety-seven acres. It is deemed unnecessary to give a full and particular description of this property, as it is presumed those willing to purchase will view it previous to the day of sale. The improvements consist of a comfortable framed dwelling house, and all other necessary out houses. The terms of sale are, that the purchaser or purchasers shall give bond, with security, for the payment of the purchase money, with interest from the day of sale, at six and twelve months. On payment of the purchase money, the subscriber is authorized to convey to the purchaser or purchasers the said property free, clear, and discharged from all claims of the Complainant or Defendant, to be commenced at 12 o'clock.

From the Village Record.
THE WEDDING.

I have often remarked the eagerness of all classes of people to read or hear the accounts of marriages. "So John has taken to himself a wife," says one. "Ah, there has been a wedding," cries another. "Lack a day," exclaims an old lady, "so Betty has got a husband at last!" and each is anxious to know all the particulars, who married them, who was there, how the bride was dressed, and so on. On such occasions I have particularly noticed that the men seem to sympathize chiefly with the bridegroom, the women with the bride, from the cause, probably, that each has been, or intend to be, in the same delicate and interesting situation of the person for whom their sympathies are excited. The reason is not difficult to explain. There is no circumstance in life half so interesting as that of entering into the holy bonds of wedlock. A choice is made of a companion for life, for good or evil, prosperity or adversity, for weal or woe, or in the good old set terms of the ceremonial—"for the better or worse." Then, too, the new clothes, the solemn ceremony; the wedding banquet, and the nameless delights appurtenant, thereto, render this period of life far more interesting than any other. Looked forward to through the kaleidoscope of hope, it presents to the young imagination an infinite variety of splendid and beautiful images, which charm like the illusions of Persian genii in the fairy tales. The young man hopes his turn may come, and I dare not sketch the picture of Bliss his fancy draws. The girl, from budding fifteen, through blushing twenty, up to ripened womanhood, feels as she hears the account of a wedding, a soft thrill vibrating like the treble chord of the piano, through every delicate nerve of her susceptible frame. Her bosom throbs quicker—she breathes with a hurried respiration—yet not painfully. No image that she need blush at ever cast its passing form across her pure mind.—yet she blushes—her eye brightens—her lips assume a deeper stain of the strawberry—she laughs and wonders what ails her, for how is she interested? The old married people are differently affected and yet they are affected. Memory busily employs herself in brushing away the cobwebs of time, (and that time is a very industrious spider,) from the conjugal bliss. The husband chuckles his deary gently under the chin, and instead of addressing himself to her as "Mrs. Mauly," or whatever her name may be, calls her by her virgin name—"My dear Lucy Howard;" and she answers with a modest cooress which speaks most eloquently of the days gone by. Meanwhile the old bachelor and old maid forget the chair is not big enough for them. The old codger whom no one truly pities but every one in turn laughs at, as a "rusty old bachelor," very probably recalls to recollection one, who in the days of youth, reciprocated with him the tenderest feelings of affection—one who listened to the music of his voice with delight, who watched his coming with anxious eye, whose ready ear distinguished the sound of his footsteps from among an hundred, who loved, promised, withered before the nuptial hour gave him the right to pillow her throbbing head in his bosom, and died. Or the long virgin, designated by the unfeeling world as "an old maid," mourns in the depth of suppressed grief, a ruddy youth, of manly brow and gallant bearing, whom the caverns of the ocean has entombed, or who dead to his plighted faith, may have sought in the arms of wealth for that happiness which true love can alone impart.—All, all are interested.

But the world! what does it care? those who are intent on gain, who worship gold as their God, and have no sympathies unconnected with lucre, verily they too, for interest sake, take a lively interest in marriages. Sitting in my easy chair, these thoughts were passing in my mind when I dozed and dreamed a feast was getting up and a large number it was thought would attend. Hymen entered, lighted by his torch—a crowd pressed to the door—but no one was to be admitted until some satisfactory reason was assigned why the person belonged to Hymen's company. No one will doubt, said the minister, my right here—in who could have performed the ceremony were I absent?" and seated himself in a large easy chair. "My worship said a justice of the peace, 'could tie the knot as tight as your reverence.' A merchant followed with bales of rich silks, and every variety of elegant patterns for wedding dresses—the mantuamaker and tailor close upon his heels. They certainly want bureaus and probably a cradle," said the cabinet maker, as he passed along. "And chairs and a settee," said the chair maker. At that instant a doctor appeared. Hymen declared he could not conceive how a disciple of Esculapius could be considered as belonging to his train. "It is a source of my most profitable employment, gravely answered the doctor.—Then I have a right too exclaimed a nurse, rushing forward, her left arm bearing a piece of a diaper. A shout was now raised from the shoemaker, the poulterer, the victualler, the schoolmaster, and the Lord knows who. Among the rest a printer popped his nose in at the door, allured by the delightful savory smell of the terrapin and oyster soup—"It is a part of my business to publish the marriages," said he. "Let them in—let them in," said Hymen, for it is impossible to tell who is not interested directly or indirectly. Bid them all welcome to the feast. And I awoke.

On full consideration, I see that there is abundant reason for the interest every body takes in the wedding, and I hear it whispered, by those who understand the signs of the times, there will be more weddings the present year and year to come, than there has been for many years past.

EPHRAIM BROOKENS.

There is a singular occurrence in the life of Strange, the celebrated engraver, which is however, as authentic as it is romantic. In the rebellion of 1745, he served in the ranks of Prince Charles's army as a common soldier. After the battle of Culloden, he was pursued by a party of the King's troops when he fled "for safety and for succour" into a friend's house. As there was no time to be lost, the soldier being close at his heels, a young lady, in the full costume of that period, viz. a dress hoop, offered to shelter him under the ample folds of her petticoat. To this strange proposal, considering all circumstances, it is not strange that he assented; and here, "patulz sub tegmine rebus," he remained undiscovered. Either love or gratitude suggested the sequel: we will suppose both conjoined. Mr. Strange was then a bachelor, and when his fortunes were more prosperous, he repaid with his hand the protection which the petticoat had offered; and we may venture to assert that no one ever yielded to its government who had better reasons for their deference to it.
