A CARD.

The Magager of the Grand

University Lottery Respectfully if orms his friends and patrons and the public, that upon can. vassing the sales in the 8th class up to this period, he finds that it will not altogether be prudent or safe for him to proceed with the drawing on the 30th instant, as anticipated He therefore solicits a little further indulgence and delay. But, he would beg leave also to state with respect to the scheme of the 8th class that, although it is one of great magnitude, still it is within the limits of the general de mand, since it does not contain more than about three tickets for each post office town in the United States, and that no exertions will be spared to effect the sale of the greater part of the tickets in aid lottery by a very early period in the fall, upon which the drawing will assuredly take place, and that -everal new arrangements are also on foot to facilitate the sales of the tickets, some of which, if not all, must prove very successful; beside the distribution of several millions of dollars soon to be made by the general government, will, it is hoped, put a new aspect upon almost every kind of business, and allow a more liberal patronage to this lottery than has been for some time past in the power of the public to bestow. He therefore confidently relies on a continuance of the approbation of a postponement, for the reasons assigned, of those who have embarked in this class in preference to all minor schemes. In the mean time, however, he will offer his friends and patrons a scheme or two similar to the 6th and 7th classes of same series of Lottery which were extremely popular; and those if anv. who, having purchased tickets in the eight class, may dislike to wait a short period, and rather than hold on and retain their chance for some of the large capitals therein, would wish to exchange the same for other chances, can at any time have the privilege of doing this at either of the Manager's offices, for tickets or shares in the 9th class, which will positively be drawn at the time mentioned. It would be but a reiteration of former statements to speak of the brilliancy and richness of the 8th class, which has no parallel in this country, and will not have its equal for many years; and adventurers will find no reason to regret a continuance of investments in said lottery on the score of advantageous speculation.

One half the profits of the sales of tickets or advance above the scheme price, made at either of the Manager's offices, in this lottery, from and after the 30th instant until further notice, will be equally divided and appropriated as follows, viz:-One por tion will be appropriated to the JEF-FERSON FUND, and the other to the benefit of the heirs of ROBERT FULTON; thus giving our citizens an opportunity of contributing a substantial testimony of their regard to the venerable Thomas Jefferson, who shared in the production of that charter so dear to Americans, is an enduring claim upon their gratitude. There is another case to which the public may with just self approbation turn its beneficence that of Robert Fulton's decendants-It is true that the great genius himself is not here to enjoy the tribute, but certainly there are none who can deny the incalculable importance of his inventions and of the ce lerity and care, the facility and certainty of conveyance and communication by steam navigation; there are few who could refuse a slight effort of liberality to his orphans to express their high sense of the benefit he has conferred on the community,

P. C. has the pleasure of offering the scheme of the 9th class to his friends and patrons, which will positively be drawn at the time now announced, if not sooner.

[By authority of the state of Maryland.]
