Ol.D Earth, who rolls her Sun-lit Car Throughout the realms of day Passing in turn each Zodiaca Physics That parkles in her way,

raund,
The various seasons bringing;
Viewed streams in ley fetters bound,
And woods with wild notes ringing, From where the Tropic's sun-burnt elime.

To scenes as fair, and more sublime, "Where the Snow flake reposes." But still in all her orbit round, That planet bright, the sun. No favoured land has ever found, But that our favoured one. For here reigns Peace, with all her train, Health, Pleasure, and Contentment, In other Lands disease and pain, War, bloodshed, and resentment.

Then let us praise the Mighty One. Who grants this special blessing, And join with hearts & hands as one, Our gratitude confessing. For turn to Castern Climes, behold,

The bloody conflict raging, The Greek and Tuck, with valour bold In desperate fight engaging. Where once famed Missalong'i stood

So beautiful and fair, So proudly rising over the flood, Now ruin lingers there. The Muslem's hand has razed her walls

And laid her glories low; And silence reigns throughout her halls So fatal was the blow. But will, not undefended, fell.

This City of the Brave, a many a turbin'd corse can tell, No Greek would live a Slive. But hit us take a glance at home, And see what things are doing:

hat has been done, & what's to com. And every thing that's browing. Canals and Reads, and other Schemes We'll have if we will take them, They surely are delightful themes, If talking would but make them.

And Symmes & Reyno'ds too, propose To travel through Earth's tunnel, One of the North pops in his nose, One takes the Southern found. When they come back, if e'er they do

Your Newsday will relate you. All that they salv of strange or new, And how they got Earth's Gate thro Till then your Newsman takes his leave Of Patrons kind and gracious, Full well assured, what he'll receive, Nor deems his hojes fallacious. January 1, 1827.

BERTRAND & ELIZA. The pipe was mute in the vallies, ed the hills weir no longer responve to the vocal reed. Three years ad elapsed since the young and ge herous Bertrand was assossinated by Caled near the castle of Erasnus, his lance hung inverted on his mb, and his manes were mingled rith the dust of his fathers. "Oh, when shall my sufferings ave an end, and the grief worn ame return to its kindred clay! ever shall thy lovely image be eased from my memory: thy virtues re engraven on my heart!" It was he voice of the amiable Eliza, ofring her evening orisons at the hrine of her beloved Bertrand. Silence held her silent domain aroughout the fertile plains, save shere the distant watch-dog mark-ld the rural hamlet. Cynthia had gained the summit of the azure hrunn, and emiled in-lucid-majes y o'er the blue expanse. All nagrd oaks led to a cluster of spreadng firs, which discovered a marble epulchre adorned with military rophies. The beautiful El za. a. niable in sorrows and patient in afiction, graced the awful scene. he was kneeling in a posture of doration and prayer, her sable arments hung loose in melancholy olds and mingled with her auburn resses; the round stear of affliction tood in her languid eye, and the ypress groves reiterated the sighs f a broken heart. In the midst f her orisons, Clifford, (by whose ssistance the assassination of Ber. rand had been perpetrated.) apcared before the sorrowful Éliza.
