The committee on public instruction to whom was referred the memorial of the Reverend Samuel Knox, principal of the Frederick Town Academy, on the subject of ducation, have had the same under consideration, and beg eave to submit the following report: The memorial is accompanied by an essay on the means of promoting the interests of public education, and the outlines of a proposed improvement, under the style of The City Institute. It prays the encouragement of the legislature, of that their sanction, and recommendation, may be given in aid of the Institution. The establishment of a school master's college, or a seminary for the instruction of teachers, has occurred to many of our enlightened and philanthropic citizens. The benefits to result from the liberal endowment, and proper management of such a school, are so palpably obvious, that it is deemed unuccessary to enlarge upon that topic. 4. It may not, liowaver, be amias to advert to a popular prejudier, which too generally prevails against the extension of public patronage to county academies or colleges, and to present a truth of force sufficient, if duly considered and appreciated to dissipte and dissipate so gross an error; it is that the virtual suppression of those institutions, from the withholding of that patronage, would powerfully tend to Harch next; at the late residence withholding of that patronage, would powerfully tend to Hester Watkins deceased, in Principles, and consequently of office, and emolument, to the infinity in large wealthy, and more numerous mem. which too generally prevails against the extension of pubnite injury of the less wealthy, and more numerous mem-

The enlarged means of diffusing learning by the ma chinery and system of the institute, and its beneficial adaptation to the business of education in large cities, may be readly conceived and comprehended. Apart from the consideration of its extrinsic merit, the exalted reputation of the learned author, and his especial knowledge in the high concernments of his profession, derived from the experience of many years, give ample assurance of great ability to devise, and to carry into effect and operation, a plan of instruction replete with consequences most essential to the permanent prosperity and happiness of the people of this state. The committee, therefore, present the following resolution:

Resolved, by the General Assembly of Maryland, That we approve of the plan of improvement in education, under the style of the City Institute, proposed by the Reverend Samuel Knox, A. M. principal of the Frederick Town Academy, and recommend the said improvement to the favourable consideration of such populous communities as are most susceptible of its beneficial adaptation.
