50 Dollars Reward.

Ran away from the subscriber residing in the city of Annapolis, on Thursday August 23d, a negro man named BASIL; he is a about 26 years of age, and when spoken to has a pleasant countenance; as he has with him a variety of clothing, I cannot describe his dress. He is about 5 feet 6 or 7 inches in height; I purchased Basil of Mr. John B. Watkins, of Prince George's county, and as he has several brothers in the neighbourhood of the Governor's Bridge, I have no doubt he is lurking there. I will give the above reward if taken out of the state, and if lodged in any goal within the state so that I get him again. I will give thirty dollars, and all reasonable charges paid if brought home. James Williamson. Sept. 6.

American Grammar,

Having carefully examined the "American Grammar," adapted to my School, and had some experience in the use of it, I can truly say that it is a most happy, timely, and judicious innovation upon the system of philology the English had to boast—I say happy, because of the masterly manner of its execution,—timely, because there was a pressing necessity for a new grammar for the honour of the sciences, and crushing—and judicious, because the author has saved every trifling and avoidable wreck of our old friend Murray. No English Scholar, however learned, will feel himself independent of this book. Grammarians who have been made such by the instructions of Murray, will be amply repaid for summing the subject, if they look into the renovated system now presented. They, especially, will be the task both easy and delightful; they will acknowledge the development of superior light, conscious of the removal of difficulties, and see innumerable obscurities chased from science. How much the pupil has accomplished, when able to dissect a sentence, and to transcribe its meaning, every Teacher knows. Without a great deal of mechanical practice, Grammar cannot be made; but its correct performance no method ever existed, so efficient, so true, so practicable, as that which the American Grammar now furnishes its purpose. I mean the whole of the scanning and sectioning system most certainly prove to be of incalculable utility. In short, its improvements are radical,—exposing and abandoning fundamental errors of the old system; its definitions are correct, lucid, and elegant,—challenging the keener criticism, and doing honour to American pretensions. Its arrangement is like SCIENCE. The style of the book is the style which Philology loves—truth and simplicity are its striking characteristics. And, to the whole in few words, the American Grammar, by James Brown, seems to possess a complete system, that only legitimate purpose, of a Grammar—namely, to transcribe, on our neighbour's mind, a true and faithful copy of the picture on our own Success to all similar institutions. J. DYKES, Teacher, Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, July 12, 1827.

From the Rev. Mr. Morrison. I have attentively perused Mr. Brown's American Grammar, and stating my opinion of it, I must say that it possesses much merit. And that the student who has been through Murray's System, I consider the American Grammar an invaluable work. The sectional reading is certainly an improvement, and on that account I put Mr. Brown's Grammar into the hands of my pupils. GEORGE MORRISON.

DEAR SIR:—Agreeably to your request, I have examined the American Grammar, and am much pleased to see the old system, would far exceed the limits prescribed. I think, however, it would be unjust to confine myself to a cold and general assent to its merits. The attention which you have paid to a clear lucidation of the subject, and to the exclusion of everything which might obscure it, were necessarily recommend your production far higher than any thing which I say.

As a teacher, I have found from experience, that while the old system studied as a drudgery, and imposed upon youth as a wearisome task, it is seized with avidity, and its contents entered into with delight. This is surprising, when it is considered that in place of burdening the memory of the intellect, in your system the dissatisfaction, and discouragement of committing to memory without understanding what he commits, is to be added only, that your work is a valuable production, even to those who have already attended to Murray's text. And I hope, that your Grammar will recommend itself to others as well as to me, and that teachers will generally introduce it.

I remain, dear sir, yours, &c. RICHARD KEMP, Teacher, Baltimore, July 17, 1827.
